New Morality Attacked by Pastor

Johnson Resumes Trip

HONOLULU (AP)—President Johnson island hops farther across the Pacific today after insisting that the Manila conference will produce neither new strategy for the war in Viet Nam nor a spectacular peace formula.

Johnson, still five days from Manila on his 29,000-mile Asian trip, was heading from Hawaii to New Zealand via Pago Pago, in American Samoa.

The President and his wife got a rousing reception Monday in Honolulu. Tens of thousands-many of them young people—jammed miles of downtown streets in a friendly colorful greeting. The state's delighted Democratic governor, John A. Burns, gave an unrestrained crowd estimate of 400,000.

Johnson responded in typical fashion, hopping out of his car at least a score of times to shake hands and, when staying inside, shouting through loudspeakers mounted inside the trunk, "Aloha, good to see you."

Even while reveling in the welcome, however, the President made clear his attention was on Manila and the Viet Nam war.

In two formal speeches in Hawaii, he went out of his way to discourage high hopes for his Oct. 24-25 meeting in the Philippines with leaders of six other countries fighting alongside the United States in Viet Nam.

At the East-West Center on the University of Hawaii campus, with several score antiwar placards hoisted above the crowd, Johnson said:

"I want my fellow countrymen to know that we are taking with us no magical wands and no instant solution."

Earlier, arriving at Honolulu International Airport Johnson discarded much of his prepared speech and read another which said:

"We do not expect to pull any rabbits out of any hats at Manila."

Without getting specific, Johnson said, "Some have predicted that this or that will happen in Manila." He said that some have forecast the sessions will produce "a new strategy of war or come forth with some spectacular formula for peace."

Johnson will be the first American president to visit American Samoa, a group of tiny islands in the South Seas that have been U.S. territory since 1899.

They fly from there to a New Zealand air station at Ohakea whose runway is big enough to accommodate the presidential jet. Prime Minister Keith J. Holyoake will meet them and take them aboard a New Zealand air force DC6 to the capital at Wellington.

The New York Daily News reported from Saigon that it had been told the President would

Dexter Pool Vote Set for Nov. 15

DEXTER -- The city council Monday night set Nov. 15 as the date for the vote on a $75,000 swimming pool bond issue.

The city last month received approval for $50,000 in federal matching funds for the pool and has applied for an additional $25,000 in matching funds for improvements of Airport park, where the pool would be located.

The bonds would be paid off over a 10-year period with an interest rate of 5 per cent and payments of $7,500 a year.

Representatives from the Junior Chamber of Commerce reported that the pool would be ready for use by the end of next year if the bond issue passes.

It was decided that two judges and one clerk would work on the election.

City Attorney Paul McGhee reported he had received two bills for the proposed low rent housing project which has been delayed because of protests by citizens.

Architect Stanely Brown of Dallas, Tex., submitted a bill to the city for $9,700, and G. A. Parker, original attorney for the housing assistance administration, submitted a $6,089.61 bill. Total of the two bills is $15,787.61, which the city must pay, regardless whether the housing project is built.

The city is still trying to decide what to do about the project, but officials favor completion of the low rent homes.

Alderman Lehman Godwin requested that the mayor and council attend a community development course sponsored by the University of Missouri extension service and that the city pay the enrollment fees.

The course will be offered Nov. 8-Dec. 13 at Sikeston high school. It was decided that the city would pay the fee for those who want to attend.

H. E. McCormick of the McCormick subdivision on the east side of Dexter requested that the north half of the subdivision

12 Firemen Feared Killed in N.Y. Fire

NEW YORK (AP) - Three aging buildings in an historic corner of downtown Manhattan billowed with flame and choking fumes today in a blaze that may have brought death to 12 firemen - the greatest single loss of life in the department's 101 years of operation.

Six firemen were killed and six others were feared dead, and 17 were injured in the basement of a three-story building on Broadway, just south of Madison Square and across the street from the Flatiron Building, the city's first skyscraper.

The collapse of four floors in the buildings, said to be 75 years old, heaped a "huge mass of debris" upon the lost firemen, said Fire Commissioner Robert O. Lowery.

"So it's going to be slow and tedious, this business of spotting the firemen and recovering their bodies," he said.

Mayor John V. Lindsay was at the scene most of the night and returned to watch the search for the missing firemen this morning.

"I'm heartsick, like everybody else," Lindsay said. "I knew it was hopeless for those men before I left. It is a tragedy."

A total of 500 firemen helped fight the blaze and search the ruins. Many were off duty, but responded when they heard of the loss of life.

A search for the victims was begun by rescue teams with oxygen masks.

Order GE Strikers Back

WASHINGTON (AP) - A U.S. District Court judge, acting under the Taft-Hartley law, ordered about 6,000 General Electric Co. employes back to work today at a plant which produces jet engines for planes needed in the Viet Nam war.

President Johnson, in a cable from Honolulu, directed early today that the court order be sought because of urgent need for the engines.

A temporary injunction, the first of a series of orders to halt a strike for 80 days, was issued in Dayton, Ohio, by Judge Carl A. Weinman.

The plant, located at Evendale, Ohio, is the only one producing jet engines used in the F4 Phantom fighter and a reconnaissance version of the same plane, both important in the Viet Nam war.

A spokesman for the AFL-CIO United Auto Workers Union said the employes would be sent back to work immediately.

The UAW and the International Association of Machinists--both AFL-CIO - represent the employes, who walked out at midnight Sunday in a dispute over local issues.

The White House announced that Johnson had cabled Deputy Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark early today, and the Justice Department prepared and filed the petition in Dayton.

Legislator Says U.S. Losing Nuclear Edge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson said today the Soviet Union is conducting intensive nuclear weapons research which could threaten the U.S. "commanding lead" in that field.

Jackson, a Washington Democrat, made that statement in a report prepared for the Senate on the safeguards provided by the partial nuclear test-ban treaty.

"The Soviet Union is carrying out a very intensive nuclear weapons research and development program," Jackson said, "has displayed new missile delivery systems in their recent parades and continues a very active underground nuclear weapons test program."

"We can no longer be assured that we own a commanding lead in the field of nuclear weapons systems," Jackson said, "and must assume that the Soviets will narrow the gap materially if we do not do everything the safeguards permit in support of our own nuclear weapons capability."

The treaty, approved by the Senate Sept. 24, 1963, bans all but underground nuclear tests.

Theft Reported Of Copper Wire

A roll of copper was reported to police to have been stolen today from the Frisco Railroad tool house at Maude and North Frisco.

The breakin was reported by C. I. Uhr of Chaffee, a signal maintenance man.

Entrance was believed to have been gained through a window on the north side of the building, police reported.

The wire was on a spool and weighed about 100 pounds, police said. Its value was estimated at $50.

Common Religious Goal Discussed by Traveler

All religious beliefs have a common goal of self improvement Mrs. Robert S. Matthews told the Rotary club last night in discussing an around-the-world trip in which she studied them.

The club met at the Rustic Rock for dinner then went to the Matthews home at 1010 North Ranney St. for her talk and to examine religious symbols collected on the trip.

She discussed Buddhism, Hinduism, Parseeism, Moslem, Judaism and Christianity and related each to her travels.

"I have been a student of art, history and archaeology and I soon learned that if I understood the background of any country I also must study the influence of religion," she said.

"My trip was not a cruise but the culmination of study."

She closed her talk with brief quotations from documents of the six religions she discussed to demonstrate the similarity in their beliefs.

Discussing art forms associated with religions she said that almost everything has been a symbol but mentioned the frequency in which the cross, swastika, snake and bull have been used.

All life is sacred to the Buddhist and in discussing the items which a Buddhist monk is permitted to carry she mentioned a strainer. This permits the monk to strain his drinking water, removing some impurities but it also prevents him from taking insect life by crushing or swallowing them.

Mrs. Matthews said that there usually was a historical reason for every religious custom regardless of how strange they appeared to a foreigner.

"Christianity has the largest membership with 850 million believing in the single God idea," she said.

John Kuehle introduced Mrs. Matthews.

Loyd Williams and Gene Williams, both of Dexter, and Herbert Rogers, Halifax, N.S., were visiting Rotarians. Bill O'Guinn was a guest of Wendell Woodard.

General Baptists Convene in City

Community leaders, parents and everyone with a sense of decency today were called on to become aroused to the dangers of the new morality and to do all they can to save the children.

"Time is of the essence," Dr. Ollie Latch said. "Even now there churns in my soul a terrible fear that we may be too late," Dr. Latch, pastor of the Cleveland Avenue General Baptist Church in Kansas City said.

The challenge was offered at the opening featured speech of the 97th Annual meeting of the General Association of General Baptists. The meeting will continue through Thursday morning. Sessons are being held at the Armory. Representatives for General Baptist churches in 15 states are attending sessions. More than 900 attended.

Dr. Latch this morning prefaced his talk with a recent quotation from news analyst Walter Lippmann: "Modern man is living today amidst the consequences of emancipation from established authority."

Unwillingness to accept authority has sent several persons to a serious exploration of the moral dilemmas of our time, Dr. Latch said.

First news reports of the new morality were worded carefully in 1964. Discussion brought to the forefront the bold ideas of the new morality which appeared in newspapers, books and other reports by the summer of 1965, he began.

Quoting news accounts of a speech by Dr. Joseph Fletcher, professor of ethics in the Episcopal Theological seminary of Cambridge, Mass., Dr. Latch explained:

Moral conduct according to the new code depends on the situation. He quoted Dr. Fletcher as saying:

"Depending upon the circumstances unmarried love could be infinitely more moral than married love. Lying could be more Christian than telling the truth. Stealing could be better than respecting private property."

"We must assume that if three of the Ten Commandments can be annulled by circumstances, all of them may be. So this is the new morality," Dr. Latch said.

Referring to the principles expounded by Machiavelli in "The Prince," Dr. Latch stated the principles are not really new at all. The code of justifying any action to maintain rule were laid by Machiavelli and adopted by Marxists and passed into the whole Communist system, he said.

Dr. Latch told of a ballet that called for a nude man and woman to perform a dance in a church in New York City in 1965. This was hard to believe, but it happened, he said. This is an example of the new morality when it pervades church life, Dr. Latch stated.

This ballet is an example of the fruit of the new morality in action -- right in the church and right under the cross. There evil is called good, he continued.

Admitting that there is moral degeneration rife in youth and adult alike, Dr. Latch stated that every thinking person would like to find a solution.

But, he stated, those imbued with the new morality have no answers.

He referred to a guest editorial in the Detroit Free Press written by the Rev. Robert Eddy, pastor of the Universalist Uniterian church of Farmington, Mich., 1965. Rev. Eddy was a youth guidance chairman in that suburb of Detroit when he chose to write on the subject of promiscuous sexual activity of many young people, Latch explained.

Quoting the news report Mr. Eddy's article Latch continued: "With parental consent, teenagers should be permitted to live together as if they were married." The state should not, he declared, restrict the right of the teenagers to enjoy sexual intercourse. The state should, he thought, set an age limit below which conception would be illegal! This is the new morality applied to social problems, Dr. Latch said.

"I must admit in baffled shame that here, at least to me, is something new. I freely admit that I do not know all the social mores of all the tribes on earth. However, I have done some study and reading in sociology and I never heard of a tribe, pagan or otherwise, where this would not be considered rankest adultery," Dr. Latch said.

Dr. Latch first expressed regret in finding such ideas coming from the ministry. He also stated that it is his belief that such bold immorality would not be so brazenly offered "if we were not over-sexed, decadent, and ready for it."

"I see the magazines that people put on their coffee tables--magazines covered by near nudes and filled with sexy advertisements," he said.

"I read reviews of movies to which people take their children. I watch the terrible suggestiveness that comes in TV shows and commercials. I wonder if our children are not mentally prepared for the sex act before they are physically able to perform it.

Decrying apathetic reaction to the circumstances described

JFK Film Not Well Attended in Dallas

DALLAS, TEX. (AP) - A dramatic documentary about President John F. Kennedy has drawn small audiences in this city where he was assassinated almost three years ago.

The movie, "Years of Lightning, Day of Drums," closes tonight after a two-week run.

"I don't think too many people here want to see it yet," said Norman Levinson, manager of the Festival Theater.

"The movie has done fair, but I have been disappointed. I felt it would do better than it did."

The film includes pictures of Kennedy's reception at the Dallas airport and of the motorcade through downtown Dallas when he was asassinated Nov. 22, 1963.

Two preview showings were sold out in the 450-seat theater, but Levinson declined to estimate how many persons saw the film here.

California Driver Hurt

A Santa Barbara, Calif., woman is in serious condition after her car struck a culvert, 10 miles north of Sikeston, off highway 61, Monday at 2:15 p.m.

She is Gladys Wallis Trott, 71. She was traveling north in a 1966 Chevrolet when a 1959 Chevrolet, driven by Jim Wingate, 47, Oran, also traveling north attempted to make a left turn.

The woman drove into a ditch to avoid striking the Wingate car. She suffered a broken nose, fractured wrists and knee and chest injuries. She was taken to the Missouri Delta Community Hospital. There were no arrests.

In a two-truck crash on the Cairo bridge at 12:05 a.m. today, one of the drivers was injured, slightly. Both vehicles were heavily damaged.

A 1965 Chevrolet truck, driven by Ashley Mayfield Carney, 51, Memphis traveling east sideswiped a 1964 westbound truck, driven by James Hunt, 33, Cordele, Ga., on a curve in the bridge.

The Carney truck was turned around and was a total loss. Its driver received a cut on his arm and lip, and was taken to the Cairo hospital. The Hunt truck's damage was estimated at $1,500.

Not All Children In Need Reached

"With the many agencies and programs around, you would think that all needy children are taken care of," Judge Marshall Craig, of the 33rd judicial circuit, told the Scott county child welfare committee, at its monthly meeting Monday night.

"Unfortunately, this isn't always so," he explained. "It is sometimes amazing how many children don't fit into the existing programs."

"Our hope in juvenile court is to step in and take the place of, or substitute for, parents when this is necessary."

He pointed out that with the recent supreme court decisions on the rights of the individual, the basic pattern of the juvenile court may be drastically changed.

"Juvenile court does not now operate like a criminal court. We sit around a table with the parents and children and talk informally so there is as little embarrassment as possible. It seems to me that our work would be hampered if our sessions were recorded in the newspaper. People tend to use this type of news for gossip. That doesn't help the child.

"There are children who are criminals, just as there are adults who are criminals. Whether they are made or born, I don't know. But it is the 98 per cent, who are not criminals that we are concerned with.

The answer to most of our immediate problems is foster home care."

He explained that, "when you have studied the later lives of children," who were taken from undesirable homes and placed in foster homes, the percentage who turn out good is so encouraging that you wish you, could reach all children.

"Sociologists have proved," he continued, "that children do better in foster care than in institutional care. Children need to receive love and affection rather than just be a number.

"Adoptive homes aren't hard to find," he commented, "it's harder to get the children to fill them. But there is a continual problem in finding foster homes."

"A particular problem is to find homes for Negro and mentally retarded children," he said. "The mentally retarded child is the hardest to place, even temporarily. Often they are delinquent because they don't know the difference between right and wrong, and lack proper supervision and guidance.

"They could be brought out of most of this if they were in a foster home," he emphasized.

Pointing out the functions of a child welfare advisory committee, Judge Craig said he felt that if people knew the problems they would open their homes to

Conflict on JFK Reburial

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Corps of Army Engineers, contradicting other Army sources, said today the body of President John F. Kennedy would not be moved to a new gravesite until next year.

Previous word was that the remains would be moved about 40 feet to a new location sometime within five weeks, after darkness has settled on the hills of Arlington National Cemetery.

That indicated that the reburial would take place by Nov. 22, the third anniversary of the young president's assassination.

However, the office of the chief of engineers, said in a statement today:

"The final landscape design proposal for the gravesite area is being developed by the landscape architect. As we have explained, the gravesite will not be completed formally until next spring.

"The transfer of the graves is related to the planting and appropriate hillside grading. No transfer therefore is anticipated this year."

The reburial is expected to take place at night after the cemetery has closed, to insure privacy.

Kennedy's body and those of his two children who died in infancy, Patrick Bouvier Kennedy and "baby girl Kennedy," will be moved to a permanent grave site now nearing completion.

The prime consideration in relocating the late president's grave was to place it in a direct axis line with the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument across the Potomac River in the nation's capital.

Work on the $2-million grave site began about a year ago in an area adjacent to the three grass-covered graves which are surrounded by a low, white picket fence.

Millions have visited Kennedy's temporary grave, where an eternal flame has flickered day and night since his burial.

The flame will be included in the permanent grave site, a marble and granite memorial with a circular walkway 210 feet in diameter.

Explosion Kills 2 Men in Alton

ALTON, Ill. (AP) - Two men were killed Monday when 7,000 pounds of gunpowder exploded inside a truck trailer, sending flaming debris over a square-block area and destroying three buildings.

The dead were Murle Olive, 53, owner of Murle's Bait Shop located two blocks from downtown Alton, and Harry Braga, about 40, of De Soto, Kan., an employe of Pilshaw Ammunition Co. of Kansas City.

The shop, which sells ammunition to hunters, and two adjacent homes in the area were set afire.

The driver of the truck, Leonard Summers, 34, of Kansas City, suffered minor burns.

Officers said the blast occurred as Summers and the two victims were unloading part of the explosive cargo. Sixty firemen battled the resulting blaze for nearly an hour.

Quake Toll Heads for 100 Mark

LIMA, Peru (AP) - The death toll from a violent earthquake along Peru's central coast climbed toward 100 today, but tidal waves generated by the earth shock diminished as they rolled across the Pacific.

Hawaii, where President Johnson was spending the first night of his Asian tour, was put on a tidal wave alert with sirens sounding a warning every hour. Only a minor wave reached Hawaii's shores and the alert was called off.

High seas along the Peruvian coast went down during the night.

Unofficial reports told of 83 dead in Peru from the quake, at least 1,000 injured and unknown numbers homeless, but the count was far from complete. Many persons spent the night in the streets.

The severe quake, 7.6 on a scale with a maximum of 9, rocked and terrorized the coastal area for about a minute and a half Monday afternoon.

Thousands ran screaming into the streets, village plazas and other open areas as buildings shook and crumbled. Women knelt in prayer while brick and wood cascaded around them.

Unofficial reports listed 19 dead in Lima, 32 in Calao, the port seven miles to the west of the Peruvian capital 27 in Huacho, 3 in Puente Piedra, 1 in Zapallal and 1 in Cerro Gordo. Officials predicted the toll would go higher.

The quake's epicenter was located at sea off Chancay, said a seismologist. The tremor struck just before the evening rush hour, causing a giant traffic jam in Lima, and was felt north to Ecuador and south to Chile.

In 1940, an earthquake killed 200 persons in Peru and injured 5,000. A quake which hit Peru and Ecuador in 1868 killed 25,000 persons.

New Morality Attacked by Pastor

Johnson Resumes Trip

HONOLULU (AP)—President Johnson island hops farther across the Pacific today after insisting that the Manila conference will produce neither new strategy for the war in Viet Nam nor a spectacular peace formula.

Johnson, still five days from Manila on his 29,000-mile Asian trip, was heading from Hawaii to New Zealand via Pago Pago, in American Samoa.

The President and his wife got a rousing reception Monday in Honolulu. Tens of thousands-many of them young people—jammed miles of downtown streets in a friendly colorful greeting. The state's delighted Democratic governor, John A. Burns, gave an unrestrained crowd estimate of 400,000.

Johnson responded in typical fashion, hopping out of his car at least a score of times to shake hands and, when staying inside, shouting through loudspeakers mounted inside the trunk, "Aloha, good to see you."

Even while reveling in the welcome, however, the President made clear his attention was on Manila and the Viet Nam war.

In two formal speeches in Hawaii, he went out of his way to discourage high hopes for his Oct. 24-25 meeting in the Philippines with leaders of six other countries fighting alongside the United States in Viet Nam.

At the East-West Center on the University of Hawaii campus, with several score antiwar placards hoisted above the crowd, Johnson said:

"I want my fellow countrymen to know that we are taking with us no magical wands and no instant solution."

Earlier, arriving at Honolulu International Airport Johnson discarded much of his prepared speech and read another which said:

"We do not expect to pull any rabbits out of any hats at Manila."

Johnson will be the first American president to visit American Samoa, a group of tiny islands in the South Seas that have been U.S. territory since 1899.

They fly from there to a New Zealand air station at Ohakea whose runway is big enough to accommodate the presidential jet. Prime Minister Keith J. Holyoake will meet them and take them aboard a New Zealand air force DC6 to the capital at Wellington.

Dexter Pool Vote Set for Nov. 15

DEXTER -- The city council Monday night set Nov. 15 as the date for the vote on a $75,000 swimming pool bond issue.

The city last month received approval for $50,000 in federal matching funds for the pool and has applied for an additional $25,000 in matching funds for improvements of Airport park, where the pool would be located.

The bonds would be paid off over a 10-year period with an interest rate of 5 per cent and payments of $7,500 a year.

Representatives from the Junior Chamber of Commerce reported that the pool would be ready for use by the end of next year if the bond issue passes.

It was decided that two judges and one clerk would work on the election.

City Attorney Paul McGhee reported he had received two bills for the proposed low rent housing project which has been delayed because of protests by citizens.

Architect Stanely Brown of Dallas, Tex., submitted a bill to the city for $9,700, and G. A. Parker, original attorney for the housing assistance administration, submitted a $6,089.61 bill. Total of the two bills is $15,787.61, which the city must pay, regardless whether the housing project is built.

The city is still trying to decide what to do about the project, but officials favor completion of the low rent homes.

Alderman Lehman Godwin requested that the mayor and council attend a community development course sponsored by the University of Missouri extension service and that the city pay the enrollment fees.

The course will be offered Nov. 8-Dec. 13 at Sikeston high school. It was decided that the city would pay the fee for those who want to attend.

12 Firemen Feared Killed in N.Y. Fire

NEW YORK (AP) - Three aging buildings in an historic corner of downtown Manhattan billowed with flame and choking fumes today in a blaze that may have brought death to 12 firemen - the greatest single loss of life in the department's 101 years of operation.

Six firemen were killed and six others were feared dead, and 17 were injured in the basement of a three-story building on Broadway, just south of Madison Square and across the street from the Flatiron Building, the city's first skyscraper.

The collapse of four floors in the buildings, said to be 75 years old, heaped a "huge mass of debris" upon the lost firemen, said Fire Commissioner Robert O. Lowery.

"So it's going to be slow and tedious, this business of spotting the firemen and recovering their bodies," he said.

Mayor John V. Lindsay was at the scene most of the night and returned to watch the search for the missing firemen this morning.

"I'm heartsick, like everybody else," Lindsay said. "I knew it was hopeless for those men before I left. It is a tragedy."

A total of 500 firemen helped fight the blaze and search the ruins. Many were off duty, but responded when they heard of the loss of life.

A search for the victims was begun by rescue teams with oxygen masks.

Six hours after the first alarm at 9:55 p.m. Monday, tongues of

Order GE Strikers Back

WASHINGTON (AP) - A U.S. District Court judge, acting under the Taft-Hartley law, ordered about 6,000 General Electric Co. employes back to work today at a plant which produces jet engines for planes needed in the Viet Nam war.

President Johnson, in a cable from Honolulu, directed early today that the court order be sought because of urgent need for the engines.

A temporary injunction, the first of a series of orders to halt a strike for 80 days, was issued in Dayton, Ohio, by Judge Carl A. Weinman.

The plant, located at Evendale, Ohio, is the only one producing jet engines used in the F4 Phantom fighter and a reconnaissance version of the same plane, both important in the Viet Nam war.

A spokesman for the AFL-CIO United Auto Workers Union said the employes would be sent back to work immediately.

The UAW and the International Association of Machinists--both AFL-CIO - represent the employes, who walked out at midnight Sunday in a dispute over local issues.

The White House announced that Johnson had cabled Deputy Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark early today, and the Justice Department prepared and filed the petition in Dayton.

Legislator Says U.S. Losing Nuclear Edge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson said today the Soviet Union is conducting intensive nuclear weapons research which could threaten the U.S. "commanding lead" in that field.

Jackson, a Washington Democrat, made that statement in a report prepared for the Senate on the safeguards provided by the partial nuclear test-ban treaty.

"The Soviet Union is carrying out a very intensive nuclear weapons research and development program," Jackson said, "has displayed new missile delivery systems in their recent parades and continues a very active underground nuclear weapons test program."

"We can no longer be assured that we own a commanding lead in the field of nuclear weapons systems," Jackson said, "and must assume that the Soviets will narrow the gap materially if we do not do everything the safeguards permit in support of our own nuclear weapons capability."

The treaty, approved by the Senate Sept. 24, 1963, bans all but underground nuclear tests.

General Baptists Convene in City

Community leaders, parents and everyone with a sense of decency today were called on to become aroused to the dangers of the new morality and to do all they can to save the children.

"Time is of the essence," Dr. Ollie Latch said. "Even now there churns in my soul a terrible fear that we may be too late," Dr. Latch, pastor of the Cleveland Avenue General Baptist Church in Kansas City said.

The challenge was offered at the opening featured speech of the 97th Annual meeting of the General Association of General Baptists. The meeting will continue through Thursday morning. Sessons are being held at the Armory. Representatives for General Baptist churches in 15 states are attending sessions. More than 900 attended.

Dr. Latch this morning prefaced his talk with a recent quotation from news analyst Walter Lippmann: "Modern man is living today amidst the consequences of emancipation from established authority."

Unwillingness to accept authority has sent several persons to a serious exploration of the moral dilemmas of our time, Dr. Latch said.

First news reports of the new morality were worded carefully in 1964. Discussion brought to the forefront the bold ideas of the new morality which appeared in newspapers, books and other reports by the summer of 1965, he began.

Quoting news accounts of a speech by Dr. Joseph Fletcher, professor of ethics in the Episcopal Theological seminary of Cambridge, Mass., Dr. Latch explained:

Moral conduct according to the new code depends on the situation. He quoted Dr. Fletcher as saying:

"Depending upon the circumstances unmarried love could be infinitely more moral than married love. Lying could be more Christian than telling the truth. Stealing could be better than respecting private property."

"We must assume that if three of the Ten Commandments can be annulled by circumstances, all of them may be. So this is the new morality," Dr. Latch said.

Referring to the principles expounded by Machiavelli in "The Prince," Dr. Latch stated the principles are not really new at all. The code of justifying any action to maintain rule were laid by Machiavelli and adopted by Marxists and passed into the whole Communist system, he said.

Dr. Latch told of a ballet that called for a nude man and woman to perform a dance in a church in New York City in 1965. This was hard to believe, but it happened, he said. This is an example of the new morality when it pervades church life, Dr. Latch stated.

This ballet is an example of the fruit of the new morality in action -- right in the church and right under the cross. There evil is called good, he continued.

Admitting that there is moral degeneration rife in youth and adult alike, Dr. Latch stated that every thinking person would like to find a solution.

But, he stated, those imbued with the new morality have no answers.

He referred to a guest editorial in the Detroit Free Press written by the Rev. Robert Eddy, pastor of the Universalist Uniterian church of Farmington, Mich., 1965. Rev. Eddy was a youth guidance chairman in that suburb of Detroit when he chose to write on the subject of promiscuous sexual activity of many young people, Latch explained.

Quoting the news report Mr. Eddy's article Latch continued: "With parental consent, teenagers should be permitted to live together as if they were married." The state should not, he declared, restrict the right of the teenagers to enjoy sexual intercourse. The state should, he thought, set an age limit below which conception would be illegal! This is the new morality applied to social problems, Dr. Latch said.

"I must admit in baffled shame that here, at least to me, is something new. I freely admit that I do not know all the social mores of all the tribes on earth. However, I have done some study and reading in sociology and I never heard of a tribe, pagan or otherwise, where this would not be considered rankest adultery," Dr. Latch said.

Dr. Latch first expressed regret in finding such ideas coming from the ministry. He also stated that it is his belief that such bold immorality would not be so brazenly offered "if we were not over-sexed, decadent, and ready for it."

"I see the magazines that people put on their coffee tables--magazines covered by near nudes and filled with sexy advertisements," he said.

"I read reviews of movies to which people take their children. I watch the terrible suggestiveness that comes in TV shows and commercials. I wonder if our children are not mentally prepared for the sex act before they are physically able to perform it.

Theft Reported Of Copper Wire

A roll of copper was reported to police to have been stolen today from the Frisco Railroad tool house at Maude and North Frisco.

The breakin was reported by C. I. Uhr of Chaffee, a signal maintenance man.

Entrance was believed to have been gained through a window on the north side of the building, police reported.

The wire was on a spool and weighed about 100 pounds, police said. Its value was estimated at $50.

Common Religious Goal Discussed by Traveler

All religious beliefs have a common goal of self improvement Mrs. Robert S. Matthews told the Rotary club last night in discussing an around-the-world trip in which she studied them.

The club met at the Rustic Rock for dinner then went to the Matthews home at 1010 North Ranney St. for her talk and to examine religious symbols collected on the trip.

She discussed Buddhism, Hinduism, Parseeism, Moslem, Judaism and Christianity and related each to her travels.

"I have been a student of art, history and archaeology and I soon learned that if I understood the background of any country I also must study the influence of religion," she said.

"My trip was not a cruise but the culmination of study."

She closed her talk with brief quotations from documents of the six religions she discussed to demonstrate the similarity in their beliefs.

Discussing art forms associated with religions she said that almost everything has been a symbol but mentioned the frequency in which the cross, swastika, snake and bull have been used.

All life is sacred to the Buddhist and in discussing the items which a Buddhist monk is permitted to carry she mentioned a strainer. This permits the monk to strain his drinking water, removing some impurities but it also prevents him from taking insect life by crushing or swallowing them.

Mrs. Matthews said that there usually was a historical reason for every religious custom regardless of how strange they appeared to a foreigner.

"Christianity has the largest membership with 850 million believing in the single God idea," she said.

John Kuehle introduced Mrs. Matthews.

Loyd Williams and Gene Williams, both of Dexter, and Herbert Rogers, Halifax, N.S., were visiting Rotarians. Bill O'Guinn was a guest of Wendell Woodard.

JFK Film Not Well Attended in Dallas

DALLAS, TEX. (AP) - A dramatic documentary about President John F. Kennedy has drawn small audiences in this city where he was assassinated almost three years ago.

The movie, "Years of Lightning, Day of Drums," closes tonight after a two-week run.

"I don't think too many people here want to see it yet," said Norman Levinson, manager of the Festival Theater.

"The movie has done fair, but I have been disappointed. I felt it would do better than it did."

The film includes pictures of Kennedy's reception at the Dallas airport and of the motorcade through downtown Dallas when he was asassinated Nov. 22, 1963.

Two preview showings were sold out in the 450-seat theater, but Levinson declined to estimate how many persons saw the film here.

California Driver Hurt

A Santa Barbara, Calif., woman is in serious condition after her car struck a culvert, 10 miles north of Sikeston, off highway 61, Monday at 2:15 p.m.

She is Gladys Wallis Trott, 71. She was traveling north in a 1966 Chevrolet when a 1959 Chevrolet, driven by Jim Wingate, 47, Oran, also traveling north attempted to make a left turn.

The woman drove into a ditch to avoid striking the Wingate car. She suffered a broken nose, fractured wrists and knee and chest injuries. She was taken to the Missouri Delta Community Hospital. There were no arrests.

In a two-truck crash on the Cairo bridge at 12:05 a.m. today, one of the drivers was injured, slightly. Both vehicles were heavily damaged.

A 1965 Chevrolet truck, driven by Ashley Mayfield Carney, 51, Memphis traveling east sideswiped a 1964 westbound truck, driven by James Hunt, 33, Cordele, Ga., on a curve in the bridge.

The Carney truck was turned around and was a total loss. Its driver received a cut on his arm and lip, and was taken to the Cairo hospital. The Hunt truck's damage was estimated at $1,500.

Not All Children In Need Reached

"With the many agencies and programs around, you would think that all needy children are taken care of," Judge Marshall Craig, of the 33rd judicial circuit, told the Scott county child welfare committee, at its monthly meeting Monday night.

"Unfortunately, this isn't always so," he explained. "It is sometimes amazing how many children don't fit into the existing programs."

"Our hope in juvenile court is to step in and take the place of, or substitute for, parents when this is necessary."

He pointed out that with the recent supreme court decisions on the rights of the individual, the basic pattern of the juvenile court may be drastically changed.

"Juvenile court does not now operate like a criminal court. We sit around a table with the parents and children and talk informally so there is as little embarrassment as possible. It seems to me that our work would be hampered if our sessions were recorded in the newspaper. People tend to use this type of news for gossip. That doesn't help the child.

"There are children who are criminals, just as there are adults who are criminals. Whether they are made or born, I don't know. But it is the 98 per cent, who are not criminals that we are concerned with.

The answer to most of our immediate problems is foster home care."

He explained that, "when you have studied the later lives of children," who were taken from undesirable homes and placed in foster homes, the percentage who turn out good is so encouraging that you wish you, could reach all children.

"Sociologists have proved," he continued, "that children do better in foster care than in institutional care. Children need to receive love and affection rather than just be a number.

"Adoptive homes aren't hard to find," he commented, "it's harder to get the children to fill them. But there is a continual problem in finding foster homes."

"A particular problem is to find homes for Negro and mentally retarded children," he said. "The mentally retarded child is the hardest to place, even temporarily. Often they are delinquent because they don't know the difference between right and wrong, and lack proper supervision and guidance.

"They could be brought out of most of this if they were in a foster home," he emphasized.

Pointing out the functions of a child welfare advisory committee, Judge Craig said he felt that if people knew the problems they would open their homes to

Conflict on JFK Reburial

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Corps of Army Engineers, contradicting other Army sources, said today the body of President John F. Kennedy would not be moved to a new gravesite until next year.

Previous word was that the remains would be moved about 40 feet to a new location sometime within five weeks, after darkness has settled on the hills of Arlington National Cemetery.

That indicated that the reburial would take place by Nov. 22, the third anniversary of the young president's assassination.

However, the office of the chief of engineers, said in a statement today:

"The final landscape design proposal for the gravesite area is being developed by the landscape architect. As we have explained, the gravesite will not be completed formally until next spring.

"The transfer of the graves is related to the planting and appropriate hillside grading. No transfer therefore is anticipated this year."

The reburial is expected to take place at night after the cemetery has closed, to insure privacy.

Kennedy's body and those of his two children who died in infancy, Patrick Bouvier Kennedy and "baby girl Kennedy," will be moved to a permanent grave site now nearing completion.

The prime consideration in relocating the late president's grave was to place it in a direct axis line with the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument across the Potomac River in the nation's capital.

Work on the $2-million grave site began about a year ago in an area adjacent to the three grass-covered graves which are surrounded by a low, white picket fence.

Millions have visited Kennedy's temporary grave, where an eternal flame has flickered day and night since his burial.

The flame will be included in the permanent grave site, a marble and granite memorial with a circular walkway 210 feet in diameter.

Explosion Kills 2 Men in Alton

ALTON, Ill. (AP) - Two men were killed Monday when 7,000 pounds of gunpowder exploded inside a truck trailer, sending flaming debris over a square-block area and destroying three buildings.

The dead were Murle Olive, 53, owner of Murle's Bait Shop located two blocks from downtown Alton, and Harry Braga, about 40, of De Soto, Kan., an employe of Pilshaw Ammunition Co. of Kansas City.

The shop, which sells ammunition to hunters, and two adjacent homes in the area were set afire.

The driver of the truck, Leonard Summers, 34, of Kansas City, suffered minor burns.

Officers said the blast occurred as Summers and the two victims were unloading part of the explosive cargo. Sixty firemen battled the resulting blaze for nearly an hour.

Quake Toll Heads for 100 Mark

LIMA, Peru (AP) - The death toll from a violent earthquake along Peru's central coast climbed toward 100 today, but tidal waves generated by the earth shock diminished as they rolled across the Pacific.

Hawaii, where President Johnson was spending the first night of his Asian tour, was put on a tidal wave alert with sirens sounding a warning every hour. Only a minor wave reached Hawaii's shores and the alert was called off.

High seas along the Peruvian coast went down during the night.

Unofficial reports told of 83 dead in Peru from the quake, at least 1,000 injured and unknown numbers homeless, but the count was far from complete. Many persons spent the night in the streets.

The severe quake, 7.6 on a scale with a maximum of 9, rocked and terrorized the coastal area for about a minute and a half Monday afternoon.

Thousands ran screaming into the streets, village plazas and other open areas as buildings shook and crumbled. Women knelt in prayer while brick and wood cascaded around them.

Unofficial reports listed 19 dead in Lima, 32 in Calao, the port seven miles to the west of the Peruvian capital 27 in Huacho, 3 in Puente Piedra, 1 in Zapallal and 1 in Cerro Gordo. Officials predicted the toll would go higher.

The quake's epicenter was located at sea off Chancay, said a seismologist. The tremor struck just before the evening rush hour, causing a giant traffic jam in Lima, and was felt north to Ecuador and south to Chile.

In 1940, an earthquake killed 200 persons in Peru and injured 5,000. A quake which hit Peru and Ecuador in 1868 killed 25,000 persons.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS:
NATIONAL BIBLE WEEK

We live in an all-too-casual world--a world in which almost everything, including religion, seems to be largely taken for granted. Far too few of us give a little time each day to reading the Bible--to seek and to find in it help toward meeting the problems and confusions of our age.

That is why National Bible Week, observed October 17-23 now takes on greater meaning than ever before. It is sponsored by the Laymen's National Committee, Inc., which is an All Faiths organization. This year the chosen theme is a tremendously timely one: "THE BIBLE: GOD'S WORD--MAN'S HOPE-- IN UNITY." How much that can mean to us all!

It is anticipated that many millions of people will observe the Week and make it the outstanding and far-reaching success it deserves to be. But that is not enough. Every week should be a Bible week, every day a Bible day.

The greater our material abundance, the more faithfully we should build and sustain our spiritual values.

The Colonel said: "When you are polite to a man, and he is impolite in return, you should not be offended. You cannot afford to let his fault cause you to commit one."

* * *

The petulance and tyrannical attitude of organized labor defies understanding.

Sen. Robert Griffin, Michigan Republican, faces stiff labor union opposition, in a campaign for re-election. He is opposed because he was an author of the Landrum-Griffin labor law.

Griffin is villified by labor union leaders, denied permission to address union members and literally ostracized by organized labor.

The law was passed overwhelmingly in 1959 after an investigation by the Senate labor rackets committee disclosed union abuses.

The law offers union members a bill of rights insuring democratic administration and high standards of conduct within union organizations. It amends the Taft-Hartley act to restrict some of the most offensive abuses of union power. For example, extortionary and coercive picketing is banned.

Standards set for union officers prohibits those with felony convictions from serving within a five year period.

Union financial officers are required to qualify for bonding.

Union officers also are required to disclose conflict of interest transactions with employers.

Rights of union members are protected by limiting the terms of officers, providing for secret ballots, and restricting the use of union funds and loans to officers.

Financial reports must be filed with the government and must be available to the membership.

This bill passed the House 352-52, which was two thirds Democratic, and only two Senators voted against it.

Among those voting in favor were Senators John F. Kennedy and Hubert Humphrey.

Union leaders might be expected to support legislation which safeguards the right of members.

It is not surprising, of course, that James Hoffa, the Teamster chieftain, condemns it but the opposition AFL-CIO Leader George Meany and other union officials is astonishing.

The restriction of the law on picketing was adopted after the late Senator Kennedy reported finding "many instances" of the excesses the legislation sought to correct.

Kennedy warned that Congress "must not go home without a labor reform bill" and when the bill was passed he chided those who considered the bill critical of labor by insisting that "nothing could be further from the truth."

Other Democratic senators agreed that it would not damage honest unions.

Yet this legislation is re-emerging as a controversial law in 1966 and is being made to sound anti-labor.

Unions are far from spineless today.

Most Americans are worried about the power they hold and the ruthless way they abuse it.

The Landrum-Griffin law has been effective in preserving the rights of union members.

At this distance it is foolish to pass on Senator Griffin's stewardship to Michigan citizens, discuss other issues or deal with the qualifications of his campaign opponent.

But if he is defeated because of his role in enactment of the Landrum-Griffin law he certainly will lose for the wrong reason.

DOWN AND OUT ON WALL STREET

Simon & Schuster will publish on Tuesday (Oct. 18) a book called "Wiped Out", the story of a trader who ran through $60,000 during one of the greatest bull markets in history.

"STOCKS WILL FLUCTUATE," banker J. P. Morgan is supposed to have said in one of those investiment truisms so treasured by Wall Street. Throughout 1966, stocks have indeed been fluctuating. Mostly downward. Thousands of investors will read with instant empathy the new book, "Wiped Out" - How I Lost a Fortune in the Stock Market While the Averages Were Making New Highs.

In October 1957, when the Dow-Jones Industrial Average stood at 485, the "Anonymous Investor" who authored this book began to put his entire inherited capital of $62,000 in the stock market. In May 1964, at the crest of the bull makret, the D-J average stood at 820. But the total value of this luckless investor's portfolio was $297.78.

LOSING ON WALL STREET is easy, especially for the novice. The sheep in "Wiped Out" fell victim to "greed...cupidity pure and simple." His ride through the market was fashioned out of hot tips, impulsive phone-order buying and selling, frantic switching of glamour stocks and systems, buying on margin, and the rest of the dreadful litany of investment mistakes.

Didn't the investor have a competent broker to advise him? Many, and from the best known brokerage houses at that. "Each had systems, each thought about the market day and night, lived it as though it were a religion," laments the author. "They were as passionately foolish as I was. At least one of them lost his own personal fortune."

THE BOOK could hit jittery Wall Street like a peace scare, though it is possible that depressed stock prices already have discounted the book and every other piece of bad news, past and future. The market list began its slide in February and is still plummeting. The Dow-Jones industrial average closed on Oct. 7 at 744.32, a new low for the year and the lowest since Nov. 27, 1963, two days after President Kennedy's funeral. On average, stocks have declined about 25 per cent in value since February -- an estimated paper loss of $100 billion to U. S. investors (including investment-fund holdings, personal trust funds and non-profit organizations.

According to the 1965 New York Stock Exchange census of stockholders, about 22.5 million Americans directly own shares in business corporations or investment companies. The last big break in the market -- in 1962 -- didn't dim the lure of Wall Street. There were 5.5 million more Americans investing in 1965 than there were in 1962.

Nevertheless, many investors must be hurting now and questioning the wisdom of owning a share of American industry. Those who have suffered the most are the investors who failed to learn the lesson of another of Wall Street's pithy adages: "Bulls make money and bears make money, but hogs get nothing."

* * *

A commonly expressed reaction to a speaking appearance of Keith Fuller, assistant general manager of the Associated Press from New York, at Southeast Missouri State College was his mild support of the American presence in Viet Nam.

The faculty and students apparently had heard before only speakers who opposed this country's presence in the Southeast Asian country. They expressed surprise at hearing the other side of the story.

There probably is nothing sinister about this one-sided presentation.

The war in Viet Nam is not a popular one with the American people. Liberals oppose it vigorously. So do the Communists.

It may be that all of the lecturers making the rounds of the college campuses are opposed.

If this is true the appearance of Fuller at Southeast Missouri State cannot be described as an event balancing the scales.

Associated Press executives have never been known to vocally oppose the administration in power or risk offending the President as a news source on vital issues.

This observation is not made critically. The AP is not a policy forming organization but a news gathering agency, which prides itself on its objectivity.

All Fuller had to say on Viet Nam was that in his opinion the conflict represented an extension of policy the Johnson administration inherited from three predecessors in the White House and that if it "was right for the United States to be in Korea it was right for this country to be in Viet Nam."

The surprising reaction to this mild and highly qualified expression of support of administration policy does raise a question whether Southeast Missouri State makes any effort to present both sides of a controversy to the student body.

Getting two speakers, who have opposite viewpoints on controversial issues, such as the American presence in Viet Nam, does not mean necessarily that students will get a balanced picture.

Both viewpoints expressed may be highly prejudiced. The truth often is illusive and difficult to obtain.

Attaining objectivity or balance is difficult in the field of human opinion and experience but it remains a worthy objective.

A conscious effort should be made at Southeast Missouri State and on every college campus--indeed by every club and adult group--to provide balance by obtaining speakers on both sides of controversial subjects.

This is particularly true if there has been one or more speaking appearances by those who have espoused one side of the controversy.

Balance always is difficult to achieve but it is a goal worthy of unceasing effort.

BE BETTER DRESSED BY WATCHING TV

Television is many things to many people. Aside from the dissemination of news and amusement, it provides our populace with all sorts of valuable information. We can learn French, German and other languages from programs telecast by educational channels; and the men of this nation can find in this medium fine sartorial information. A man should select some actor who is about his type, size and shape. It might be a thin man -- like a Johnny Carson; a very tall one -- like Rock Hudson; a stoutish one -- like Jackie Gleason; or a short man -- like Paul Anka, Watch your type for a week or so, copy the things you like -- and you'll resemble your counterpart.

Two Tongues, One Voice

The Canadian government is planning to send a number of high-ranking civil servants on a foreign exchange program this fall. During the course of a year, the officials will take language courses and absorb the local culture in order to gain a better understanding of the people they are visiting.

None of them, however, will set foot outside the country. English-speaking officials will go to Montreal or Quebec, where French is the language of 84 per cent of the inhabitants. French-speaking civil servants will go to strongly Anglicized Toronto.

The novel exchange is part of a long-term program to make Canada a truly bilingual nation, at least on the governmental level.

While language difference isn't a practical problem because most French-Canadians can speak English, "it is a highly moral matter," says John S. Hodgson, director of the newly formed Secretariat on Bilingualism.

"The French-Canadians have a right to be heard by their government in their own tongue."

Trevor F. Gough, president of the Civil Service Association of Canada, puts it another way:

"Living in this country with a Frenchman is like living with a woman. You must have regard for their emotions or else all hell will break loose."

OF MICE AND MEN

In May and June of this year the Preparedness Subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Armed Services conducted hearings to determine if we had an adequate supply of military equipment of the types most needed in Viet Nam. At that time, we had only about 20,000 US servicemen in Viet Nam, but there were rumors, publicly denied by Defense Department spokesmen, that some of the equipment most vital to their mission was already in short supply. Now, the official record has been made public. The Subcommittee's hearings reveal that Defense Department officials did, indeed, testify that there were such shortages.

For reasons of security, the published record does not identify the exact equipment which was in short supply, but it quite clearly indicates that it was of the kind which is mighty important to men in combat. Equally disturbing is the indication in the published record that some of the high-ranking military men now occupying Pentagon offices were more interested in covering up, or finding excuses for the shortages, than they were in cooperating with the Senators in correcting the situation. This attitude caused one member of the Subcommittee, Senator Thurmond of South Carolina, to practically accuse some of the military officers of trying to cover up for the civilian officials whose decisions had caused the shortages. Quoted here are the Senator's words: "Are you going to let them make mice of you? Are you men or are you mice? . . . . If you have got the shortages . . . . . why don't you be fair and open and tell us why you have got them and what is needed? We want to help you . . . . but how can we when you . . . try to protect the position of the Defense Department?

No one, we're sure, questions the manliness of our men in uniform who serve in Viet Nam. But if, in fact, there are military officers in and around Washington, D. C. who would kowtow to civilian appointees to the extent of trying to cover up mistakes which endanger the lives of our men in Viet Nam, rather than speak out to a Committee of the Congress on such vital matters -- then we think some immediate transfers are in order. Passing the ammunition, and all other needed equipment, begins at the Pentagon. Those who don't pass it, or explain why, satisfactorily, don't belong there -- or in uniform.

H. L. Hunt Says

WHY DESTROY THE REPUBLIC?

The statement that patriots are far worse than communists, correctly interpreted, means "Communists are far better for our country than patriots." Many participating in the crusade against patriots are dupes, unwittingly contributing to the destruction of the Republic. Others participate for quite another reason, many for what they consider personal gain.

The "question" is never raised in the minds of the destroyers, "What am I going to get out of it if the Republic form of government of the United States is destroyed?" Patriots fail to raise that question. Finally the destroyers are going to be brought to face this question to satisfy themselves. The answer is, "The rewards will be nothing and the loss will be total."

It is easy to produce evidence, based on what has happened in countries taken over by the communists, that this group or that group would stand to lose most by destruction of our republic form of government. Included would be the clergy, congregations; all minorities, losing the protection afforded them in a constitutional republic; businessmen who find no objections to the loss of freedom by degrees; wage earners; organized labor; the apathetic citizen who just doesn't care.

Freedom of the press is guaranteed in the Constitution of our Republic. We have a citizens. With continued destruction of freedom here to the truction of freedom here to the same extent as in Communist countries of Europe, 29 out of 30 dailies published in the U.S. will be destroyed.

This illustrates the predicament to be faced by all citizens should the American profit motive system be infiltrated out of existence and supplanted by dictatorship. Liberty's enemies are destroyers and wreckers; liberty's advocates are constructive builders.

NEW YORK (AP) — Gratitude is as rare among movie stars as shyness is among flagpole sitters.

An exception is Rod Taylor, the buoyant and charmingly boisterous Australian.

"We're lucky to be around — us young punks," he said. "But I don't believe in luck in our industry.

"Luck makes people disrespectful and supercilious. Us young ones become smug too early. If you don't try hard enough, you don't last long enough."

Rod's own heroes are Clark Gable, Humphrey Bogart, and Spencer Tracy.

"They were great stars because they worked hard," he said. "And no one has taken their place.

"I'm not being insincere. People call me a movie star, but I know I don't deserve it yet."

But the ruggedly handsome actor, who recently completed "The Liquidators," was being unduly humble. At 36 his talent and industry have put him in the front rank of his profession.

In 1954 a prize-winning performance in Australia won him a plane ticket to London. Cannily, Rod stopped off at Hollywood, where the producers pounced on him with gladcries.

Since then Taylor has made 23 films, a popular television series, "Hong Kong," and graduated himself to the status of producer as well as actor.

When he plays there is nobody who likes to play harder than Taylor, and nobody who likes to work harder when he's on the job. He brings a fine breezy zest to anything he does.

"Without being artsy-crafty about it, which I'm not," he remarked, "I am very conscious of my duty to entertain.

"For some strange reason I love to do it, and I am paid an enormous sum of money to do it, and unless I do the job well I feel blankety-blank guilty."

Taylor has no overlay of sophistication. He is muscularly proud of being Australian.

"The only security an Australian has if he isn't intellectually brilliant," he said smiling, "is the knowledge that, when in doubt, and if he needs to, he can always knock you on your ears. He can always retreat to that."

Everybody is afraid of something in this "age of anxiety." What is Rod Taylor afraid of?

"Death is all I can think of," he replied. "I've got a lot of problems, but I love every crowded second of life. If you're an athlete you don't think anybody can beat you, and I'd like to live forever."

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- An important "Conference of Conservatives" is to be held in Washington this winter to celebrate the promised victories of Ronald Reagan in California, Mrs. Lurleen Wallace in Alabama, Brig. Gen. Harrison Thyng in New Hampshire, Claude Kirk in Florida, and other right-wing candidates whom the Liberty Lobby and extremist groups are backing.

To arrange for the convention, Curtis B. Dall, ex-son-in-law of Franklin D. Roosevelt, dropped into Liberty Lobby the other day to sign a letter to members asking them to vote on who should call on President Johnson to present right-wing views.

Though members of right-wing groups don't like to have their operations reported in the press, this column can reveal that an argument took place between Dall and Willis A. Carto, founder of the Liberty Lobby, as to whether Kenneth Goff should be on the delegation to see the President.

Goff is a former Communist who later teamed up with rabble-rousing, anti-semitic Gerald L. K. Smith and is now a member of the secret board which controls the Liberty Lobby. Dall, who is chairman of the Liberty Lobby's Board of Policy, argued that Goff was too controversial to be on the five-man delegation to call at the White House.

Curtis Dall, since divorced by Anna Roosevelt, only daughter of the late President Roosevelt, has been engaged in business in Philadelphia and has been a front for the Liberty Lobby. He has also been active in the constitution party which urges American withdrawal from the United Nations, the repeal of federal income and state inheritance taxes.

LOST LIBEL SUIT

In August, 1962, Dall testified before the Senate Finance Committee that the "real center and heart of this international cabal (to promote the Trade Expansion Act) shows its hand; namely, the political zionist planners for absolute rule via one world government."

When this column reported Dall's testimony and described it as anti-Semitic, he sued for $2 million but lost. He appealed right up to the supreme court, but lost in all courts.

Though the leaders of the "Conference of Conservatives" seemed confident that President Johnson would see them, it may not be as easy as they predict. This column has seen some of the files of the Liberty Lobby and can reveal the far-flung network of affiliated conservative groups which is backing Reagan in California, Mrs. Wallace in Alabama, Lester Maddox in Georgia, Brig. Gen. Thyng in New Hampshire, Robert Cline, the extremist now running for congress from Los Angeles, and other right-wing candidates around the USA.

We can also reveal that in the closet of the Liberty Lobby office of Director Willis Carto there are two high-powered Japanese rifles secreted in a packing case.

On Nov. 22, 1963, lawyers for this column were taking the pretrial deposition of John W. Wood, then attorney for the Liberty Lobby, when news of President Kennedy's assassination was received. It was suggested that in view of the assassination, the deposition should be suspended.

"You must feel as bad as Madame Nhu when President Kennedy ordered her husband gunned down," remarked Carto.

VICIOUS ATTACK ON LBJ

Carto, when asked by a subordinate on his staff what he is doing with the rifles, explained that they were to be shipped back to California. The rifles, however, are still there.

Whether President Johnson chooses to see the delegation of conservatives or not, we believe that the public is entitled to know something of their backstage operation.

The Liberty Lobby office is located at 132 3rd St., S. E., in Washington and has a working relationship with the United Republicans of America under Bruce Evans, whose goal is to have the conservatives take over the Republican party. The Liberty Lobby and the United Republicans of America frequently interchange office equipment.

Chief funds for the Liberty Lobby are raised from individual subscribers and from periodic mail appeals to a list of right-wing sympathizers. One week's mailing in August brought in approximately $100,000, which caused considerable glee on the part of Carto. He immediately went out and brought $300 worth of new office furniture.

At times the lobby has been hard up for funds, and in 1964 had to borrow money from Verne P. Cobb. It's "Liberty Letter" for $1 a year circulates to a subscription list of approximately 180,000.

Among its more generous contributors have been Conrad Chapman of Boston, J. H. PEW of the Sun Oil Company in Philadelphia, Mrs. Evelyn Beck of Alamo, Calif., E. H. Mettler of Shafter, Calif.

Most important and vicious contribution which the Liberty Lobby has made to the political picture -- at least openly -- was the six-page smear sheet called, "LBJ: A Political Biography," of which about one million copies were circulated throughout the United States during the 1964 presidential election.

Despite this, the Liberty Lobby demands a chance to send a delegation to see Johnson during the "Conference of Conservatives."

Recently the Liberty Lobby has been active in promoting aid for Rhodesia, urging deportation of American Negroes back to Africa, and claiming that the Johnson administration "does not want to win" in Viet Nam.

Some of the amazing correspondence written by executives of the Liberty Lobby will be published in an early column.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS:
NATIONAL BIBLE WEEK

We live in an all-too-casual world--a world in which almost everything, including religion, seems to be largely taken for granted. Far too few of us give a little time each day to reading the Bible--to seek and to find in it help toward meeting the problems and confusions of our age.

That is why National Bible Week, observed October 17-23 now takes on greater meaning than ever before. It is sponsored by the Laymen's National Committee, Inc., which is an All Faiths organization. This year the chosen theme is a tremendously timely one: "THE BIBLE: GOD'S WORD--MAN'S HOPE-- IN UNITY." How much that can mean to us all!

It is anticipated that many millions of people will observe the Week and make it the outstanding and far-reaching success it deserves to be. But that is not enough. Every week should be a Bible week, every day a Bible day.

The greater our material abundance, the more faithfully we should build and sustain our spiritual values.

The petulance and tyrannical attitude of organized labor defies understanding.

Sen. Robert Griffin, Michigan Republican, faces stiff labor union opposition, in a campaign for re-election. He is opposed because he was an author of the Landrum-Griffin labor law.

Griffin is villified by labor union leaders, denied permission to address union members and literally ostracized by organized labor.

The law was passed overwhelmingly in 1959 after an investigation by the Senate labor rackets committee disclosed union abuses.

The law offers union members a bill of rights insuring democratic administration and high standards of conduct within union organizations. It amends the Taft-Hartley act to restrict some of the most offensive abuses of union power. For example, extortionary and coercive picketing is banned.

Standards set for union officers prohibits those with felony convictions from serving within a five year period.

Union financial officers are required to qualify for bonding.

Union officers also are required to disclose conflict of interest transactions with employers.

Rights of union members are protected by limiting the terms of officers, providing for secret ballots, and restricting the use of union funds and loans to officers.

Financial reports must be filed with the government and must be available to the membership.

This bill passed the House 352-52, which was two thirds Democratic, and only two Senators voted against it.

Among those voting in favor were Senators John F. Kennedy and Hubert Humphrey.

Union leaders might be expected to support legislation which safeguards the right of members.

It is not surprising, of course, that James Hoffa, the Teamster chieftain, condemns it but the opposition AFL-CIO Leader George Meany and other union officials is astonishing.

The restriction of the law on picketing was adopted after the late Senator Kennedy reported finding "many instances" of the excesses the legislation sought to correct.

Kennedy warned that Congress "must not go home without a labor reform bill" and when the bill was passed he chided those who considered the bill critical of labor by insisting that "nothing could be further from the truth."

Other Democratic senators agreed that it would not damage honest unions.

Yet this legislation is re-emerging as a controversial law in 1966 and is being made to sound anti-labor.

Unions are far from spineless today.

Most Americans are worried about the power they hold and the ruthless way they abuse it.

The Landrum-Griffin law has been effective in preserving the rights of union members.

At this distance it is foolish to pass on Senator Griffin's stewardship to Michigan citizens, discuss other issues or deal with the qualifications of his campaign opponent.

But if he is defeated because of his role in enactment of the Landrum-Griffin law he certainly will lose for the wrong reason.

DOWN AND OUT ON WALL STREET

Simon & Schuster will publish on Tuesday (Oct. 18) a book called "Wiped Out", the story of a trader who ran through $60,000 during one of the greatest bull markets in history.

"STOCKS WILL FLUCTUATE," banker J. P. Morgan is supposed to have said in one of those investiment truisms so treasured by Wall Street. Throughout 1966, stocks have indeed been fluctuating. Mostly downward. Thousands of investors will read with instant empathy the new book, "Wiped Out" - How I Lost a Fortune in the Stock Market While the Averages Were Making New Highs.

In October 1957, when the Dow-Jones Industrial Average stood at 485, the "Anonymous Investor" who authored this book began to put his entire inherited capital of $62,000 in the stock market. In May 1964, at the crest of the bull makret, the D-J average stood at 820. But the total value of this luckless investor's portfolio was $297.78.

LOSING ON WALL STREET is easy, especially for the novice. The sheep in "Wiped Out" fell victim to "greed...cupidity pure and simple." His ride through the market was fashioned out of hot tips, impulsive phone-order buying and selling, frantic switching of glamour stocks and systems, buying on margin, and the rest of the dreadful litany of investment mistakes.

Didn't the investor have a competent broker to advise him? Many, and from the best known brokerage houses at that. "Each had systems, each thought about the market day and night, lived it as though it were a religion," laments the author. "They were as passionately foolish as I was. At least one of them lost his own personal fortune."

THE BOOK could hit jittery Wall Street like a peace scare, though it is possible that depressed stock prices already have discounted the book and every other piece of bad news, past and future. The market list began its slide in February and is still plummeting. The Dow-Jones industrial average closed on Oct. 7 at 744.32, a new low for the year and the lowest since Nov. 27, 1963, two days after President Kennedy's funeral. On average, stocks have declined about 25 per cent in value since February -- an estimated paper loss of $100 billion to U. S. investors (including investment-fund holdings, personal trust funds and non-profit organizations.

According to the 1965 New York Stock Exchange census of stockholders, about 22.5 million Americans directly own shares in business corporations or investment companies. The last big break in the market -- in 1962 -- didn't dim the lure of Wall Street. There were 5.5 million more Americans investing in 1965 than there were in 1962.

Nevertheless, many investors must be hurting now and questioning the wisdom of owning a share of American industry. Those who have suffered the most are the investors who failed to learn the lesson of another of Wall Street's pithy adages; "Bulls make money and bears make money, but hogs get nothing."

A commonly expressed reaction to a speaking appearance of Keith Fuller, assistant general manager of the Associated Press from New York, at Southeast Missouri State College was his mild support of the American presence in Viet Nam.

The faculty and students apparently had heard before only speakers who opposed this country's presence in the Southeast Asian country. They expressed surprise at hearing the other side of the story.

There probably is nothing sinister about this one-sided presentation.

The war in Viet Nam is not a popular one with the American people. Liberals oppose it vigorously. So do the Communists.

It may be that all of the lecturers making the rounds of the college campuses are opposed.

If this is true the appearance of Fuller at Southeast Missouri State cannot be described as an event balancing the scales.

Associated Press executives have never been known to vocally oppose the administration in power or risk offending the President as a news source on vital issues.

This observation is not made critically. The AP is not a policy forming organization but a news gathering agency, which prides itself on its objectivity.

All Fuller had to say on Viet Nam was that in his opinion the conflict represented an extension of policy the Johnson administration inherited from three predecessors in the White House and that if it "was right for the United States to be in Korea it was right for this country to be in Viet Nam."

The surprising reaction to this mild and highly qualified expression of support of administration policy does raise a question whether Southeast Missouri State makes any effort to present both sides of a controversy to the student body.

Getting two speakers, who have opposite viewpoints on controversial issues, such as the American presence in Viet Nam, does not mean necessarily that students will get a balanced picture.

Both viewpoints expressed may be highly prejudiced. The truth often is illusive and difficult to obtain.

Attaining objectivity or balance is difficult in the field of human opinion and experience but it remains a worthy objective.

A conscious effort should be made at Southeast Missouri State and on every college campus--indeed by every club and adult group--to provide balance by obtaining speakers on both sides of controversial subjects.

This is particularly true if there has been one or more speaking appearances by those who have espoused one side of the controversy.

Balance always is difficult to achieve but it is a goal worthy of unceasing effort.

OF MICE AND MEN

In May and June of this year the Preparedness Subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Armed Services conducted hearings to determine if we had an adequate supply of military equipment of the types most needed in Viet Nam. At that time, we had only about 20,000 US servicemen in Viet Nam, but there were rumors, publicly denied by Defense Department spokesmen, that some of the equipment most vital to their mission was already in short supply. Now, the official record has been made public. The Subcommittee's hearings reveal that Defense Department officials did, indeed, testify that there were such shortages.

For reasons of security, the published record does not identify the exact equipment which was in short supply, but it quite clearly indicates that it was of the kind which is mighty important to men in combat. Equally disturbing is the indication in the published record that some of the high-ranking military men now occupying Pentagon offices were more interested in covering up, or finding excuses for the shortages, than they were in cooperating with the Senators in correcting the situation. This attitude caused one member of the Subcommittee, Senator Thurmond of South Carolina, to practically accuse some of the military officers of trying to cover up for the civilian officials whose decisions had caused the shortages. Quoted here are the Senator's words: "Are you going to let them make mice of you? Are you men or are you mice? . . . . If you have got the shortages . . . . . why don't you be fair and open and tell us why you have got them and what is needed? We want to help you . . . . but how can we when you . . . try to protect the position of the Defense Department?

No one, we're sure, questions the manliness of our men in uniform who serve in Viet Nam. But if, in fact, there are military officers in and around Washington, D. C. who would kowtow to civilian appointees to the extent of trying to cover up mistakes which endanger the lives of our men in Viet Nam, rather than speak out to a Committee of the Congress on such vital matters -- then we think some immediate transfers are in order. Passing the ammunition, and all other needed equipment, begins at the Pentagon. Those who don't pass it, or explain why, satisfactorily, don't belong there -- or in uniform.

H. L. Hunt Says

WHY DESTROY THE REPUBLIC?

The statement that patriots are far worse than communists, correctly interpreted, means "Communists are far better for our country than patriots." Many participating in the crusade against patriots are dupes, unwittingly contributing to the destruction of the Republic. Others participate for quite another reason, many for what they consider personal gain.

The "question" is never raised in the minds of the destroyers, "What am I going to get out of it if the Republic form of government of the United States is destroyed?" Patriots fail to raise that question. Finally the destroyers are going to be brought to face this question to satisfy themselves. The answer is, "The rewards will be nothing and the loss will be total."

It is easy to produce evidence, based on what has happened in countries taken over by the communists, that this group or that group would stand to lose most by destruction of our republic form of government. Included would be the clergy, congregations; all minorities, losing the protection afforded them in a constitutional republic; businessmen who find no objections to the loss of freedom by degrees; wage earners; organized labor; the apathetic citizen who just doesn't care.

Freedom of the press is guaranteed in the Constitution of our Republic. We have a citizens. With continued destruction of freedom here to the truction of freedom here to the same extent as in Communist countries of Europe, 29 out of 30 dailies published in the U.S. will be destroyed.

This illustrates the predicament to be faced by all citizens should the American profit motive system be infiltrated out of existence and supplanted by dictatorship. Liberty's enemies are destroyers and wreckers; liberty's advocates are constructive builders.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON --An important "Conference of Conservatives" is to be held in Washington this winter to celebrate the promised victories of Ronald Reagan in California, Mrs. Lurleen Wallace in Alabama, Brig. Gen. Harrison Thyng in New Hampshire, Claude Kirk in Florida, and other right-wing candidates whom the Liberty Lobby and extremist groups are backing.

To arrange for the convention, Curtis B. Dall, ex-son-in-law of Franklin D. Roosevelt, dropped into Liberty Lobby the other day to sign a letter to members asking them to vote on who should call on President Johnson to present right-wing views.

Though members of right-wing groups don't like to have their operations reported in the press, this column can reveal that an argument took place between Dall and Willis A. Carto, founder of the Liberty Lobby, as to whether Kenneth Goff should be on the delegation to see the President.

Goff is a former Communist who later teamed up with rabble-rousing, anti-semitic Gerald L. K. Smith and is now a member of the secret board which controls the Liberty Lobby. Dall, who is chairman of the Liberty Lobby's Board of Policy, argued that Goff was too controversial to be on the five-man delegation to call at the White House.

Curtis Dall, since divorced by Anna Roosevelt, only daughter of the late President Roosevelt, has been engaged in business in Philadelphia and has been a front for the Liberty Lobby. He has also been active in the constitution party which urges American withdrawal from the United Nations, the repeal of federal income and state inheritance taxes.

LOST LIBEL SUIT

In August, 1962, Dall testified before the Senate Finance Committee that the "real center and heart of this international cabal (to promote the Trade Expansion Act) shows its hand; namely, the political zionist planners for absolute rule via one world government."

When this column reported Dall's testimony and described it as anti-Semitic, he sued for $2 million but lost. He appealed right up to the supreme court, but lost in all courts.

Though the leaders of the "Conference of Conservatives" seemed confident that President Johnson would see them, it may not be as easy as they predict. This column has seen some of the files of the Liberty Lobby and can reveal the far-flung network of affiliated conservative groups which is backing Reagan in California, Mrs. Wallace in Alabama, Lester Maddox in Georgia, Brig. Gen. Thyng in New Hampshire, Robert Cline, the extremist now running for congress from Los Angeles, and other right-wing candidates around the USA.

We can also reveal that in the closet of the Liberty Lobby office of Director Willis Carto there are two high-powered Japanese rifles secreted in a packing case.

On Nov. 22, 1963, lawyers for this column were taking the pretrial deposition of John W. Wood, then attorney for the Liberty Lobby, when news of President Kennedy's assassination was received. It was suggested that in view of the assassination, the deposition should be suspended.

"You must feel as bad as Madame Nhu when President Kennedy ordered her husband gunned down," remarked Carto.

VICIOUS ATTACK ON LBJ

Carto, when asked by a subordinate on his staff what he is doing with the rifles, explained that they were to be shipped back to California. The rifles, however, are still there.

Whether President Johnson chooses to see the delegation of conservatives or not, we believe that the public is entitled to know something of their backstage operation.

The Liberty Lobby office is located at 132 3rd St., S. E., in Washington and has a working relationship with the United Republicans of America under Bruce Evans, whose goal is to have the conservatives take over the Republican party. The Liberty Lobby and the United Republicans of America frequently interchange office equipment.

Chief funds for the Liberty Lobby are raised from individual subscribers and from periodic mail appeals to a list of right-wing sympathizers. One week's mailing in August brought in approximately $100,000, which caused considerable glee on the part of Carto. He immediately went out and brought $300 worth of new office furniture.

At times the lobby has been hard up for funds, and in 1964 had to borrow money from Verne P. Cobb. It's "Liberty Letter" for $1 a year circulates to a subscription list of approximately 180,000.

Among its more generous contributors have been Conrad Chapman of Boston, J. H. PEW of the Sun Oil Company in Philadelphia, Mrs. Evelyn Beck of Alamo, Calif., E. H. Mettler of Shafter, Calif.

Most important and vicious contribution which the Liberty Lobby has made to the political picture -- at least openly -- was the six-page smear sheet called, "LBJ: A Political Biography," of which about one million copies were circulated throughout the United States during the 1964 presidential election.

Despite this, the Liberty Lobby demands a chance to send a delegation to see Johnson during the "Conference of Conservatives."

Recently the Liberty Lobby has been active in promoting aid for Rhodesia, urging deportation of American Negroes back to Africa, and claiming that the Johnson administration "does not want to win" in Viet Nam.

Some of the amazing correspondence written by executives of the Liberty Lobby will be published in an early column.

Hello! Nothing exciting has been happening to us lately. Plans are in the making but these will have to wait until they are facts before I report on them. Jean Wilson and I are planning some really good activities for the last of this week.

The Four Star Ladies Travel League has one team representing Sikeston and this team L & A Laundry (Love and Affection) consists of: Sandy and Alma York, Sandi Evans, Ruby Smith, Ruby Ann Abbott, and Mavis Riley. Last week they won three games and lost one, for 7 points. Hickory House of Poplar Bluff was their opponent of the day. In this league three teams are tied for first place. The teams are L & A Laundry, Lamberts Fabrics-- Cape, and Midwest Farms -Dexter.

In this report Alma York picked up the 5-7 split. She picked up another one but they forgot to write it down and couldn't remember the pins.

NEWCOMERS LEAGUE

Team no. 2-4 -- Team no. 6-0; Team no. 4-3 -- Team no. 1-1; Team no. 3-2 -- Team no. 5-2.

High game was bowled this week by Wilma Alford. Ruby Andres subs for this league and she came up with high series of 454.

TUESDAY HOUSEWIVES

Town and Country 4 -- Alley Cats 0; Hecklers 4 -- Rollettes 0; Ten Pins 3 -- Road Runners 1; Strikers 3 -- Pin Ups 1; Sparettes 3 -- Whiffys 1.

We had company at the lanes this week. Marie Nicholas formerly of here, then Poplar Bluff and now of Cape was here for the day and since we were one bowler short she rolled with us. She did some pretty good bowling and it was a shame we couldn't count it but at least we had a good time. Marie picked up the 2-7 split, Doris Stephens the 9-10, and Betty Hesselrode the 3-10.

Betty Estes strung games of 179-181-184 together for high series of 544. Jean Lee rolled a 518 and Mary Bain 500. Evelyn Warf rolled high game of 196. Jean Lee also hit the spot for a 194 game but the person proudest of her game I'm sure was Frances Heckemeyer who carries a 100 average and rolled a 194 too.

IMPERIALETTES

L & A Laundry 4 -- Global 0; Belltones 4 -- A & B 0; Crown 3 -- Progressive 1; Police 3 -- Kroger 1.

Ruth Ann Templeton had to show off her ability and shot high game of 197 and series of 529. Pat Smith with a 127 average rolled a 474 series. She is pretty good.

Splits picked up: Betty Kelley 2-7-10, Sandy York 3-7. Pat Lambert 4-5, Ruby Andres 5-10 and 2-7, Flora Crouthers 6-8, Lois Cokenour 3-7, Ruth Ann Templeton 5-10, Shirley Cartwight 5-10 and Pat Bridger picked up the 5-7 twice.

I bowl with Crown and we have been doing pretty good. We could do better if a certain person named Jim would come on down and keep score for us instead of just complaining when we do bad.

DELTA KEGLERS

Reiss Dairy 4 -- El Capri 0; Ziegenhorn Ins. 3 -- Barketts 1; Parker Curtis 3 -- A & B Pastries 1. Norma Baker took both high game and series with a 225 game a big 580 series. Barbara Murphy picked up the only recorded split. It was a 4-5-7.

Town and Country 4 -- Alley Cats 0; Hecklers 4 -- Rollettes 0; Ten Pins 3 -- Road Runners 1; Strikers 3 -- Pin Ups 1; Sparettes 3 -- Whiffys 1.

We had company at the lanes this week. Marie Nicholas formerly of here, then Poplar Bluff and now of Cape was here for the day and since we were one bowler short she rolled with us. She did some pretty good bowling and it was a shame we couldn't count it but at least we had a good time. Marie picked up the 2-7 split, Doris Stephens the 9-10, and Betty Hesselrode the 3-10.

Betty Estes strung games of 179-181-184 together for high series of 544. Jean Lee rolled a 518 and Mary Bain 500. Evelyn Warf rolled high game of 196. Jean Lee also hit the spot for a 194 game but the person proudest of her game I'm sure was Frances Heckemeyer who carries a 100 average and rolled a 194 too.

IMPERIAL ETTES

L & A Laundry 4 -- Global 0; Belltones 4 -- A & B 0; Crown 3 -- Progressive 1; Police 3 -- Kroger 1.

Ruth Ann Templeton had to show off her ability and shot high game of 197 and series of 529. Pat Smith with a 127 average rolled a 474 series. She is pretty good.

Splits picked up: Betty Kelley 2-7-10, Sandy York 3-7. Pat Lambert 4-5, Ruby Andres 5-10 and 2-7, Flora Crouthers 6-8, Lois Cokenour 3-7, Ruth Ann Templeton 5-10, Shirley Cartwight 5-10 and Pat Bridger picked up the 5-7 twice.

I bowl with Crown and we have been doing pretty good. We could do better if a certain person named Jim would come on down and keep score for us instead of just complaining when we do bad.

DELTA KEGLERS

Reiss Dairy 4 -- El Capri 0; Ziegenhorn Ins. 3 -- Barketts 1; Parker Curtis 3 -- A & B Pastries 1. Norma Baker took both high game and series with a 225 game a big 580 series. Barbara Murphy picked up the only recorded split. It was a 4-5-7.

ROYAL KEGLERS

Malone and Hyde 4 -- Bank of Sikeston 0; Lewis Furniture 4-- Mutual of Omaha 0; C. D. Alcorn 3-- General Oil 1; Ferrell Rental 3 -- First National Bank 1; Busch Bavarian 3 -- Liberty Supermarket 1; Holyfield Flying 2 -- Wades Body Shop 2.

Billie Garner rolled high game of 227 and series of 576 . Other high games and series were: Dottye Lefler 220 - 505, Linda Gipson 213-513, Clara Mathis a 203 game and Glenda Becker a 535 series. Splits picked up were-Flora Crouthers 5-10, Irene Rogers 5-10, Frances Leigh 5-7, and Faye Elliot 6-7.

Sorry still no reports from the Friday Bowletts.

See you all next week!

Charleston threatened midway in the first period. The Blue-Jays drove to the Sikeston one but fumbled and Dennis Snelling carried the ball to the 25 from where Bruce Farris ran 75 yards for another Dog TD. Edwards converted and the Dogs led 20-0 at the end of the first period.

Midway in the second period a BlueJay fumble after a punt cost the Jays another TD as Comstock went 15 yards for the score.

Swift's Services Wednesday

DETROIT (AP) — Bob Swift, baseball's greatest pinch-manager, died Monday of lung cancer. He was 51.

Swift, a one-time major league catcher, posted winning records twice with the Detroit Tigers and once with the Kansas City Athletics when called to the manager's job on an interim basis because of illnesses.

This past season he took over the Tigers a second time when Manager Charlie Dressen suffered his second heart attack. Swift himself had to be relieved shortly after the All-Star game. He entered a hospital for a stomach ailment and it was found he had lung cancer.

Frank Skaff piloted the Tigers to the end of the season and then Mayo Smith was named to the post.

When Harry Craft became ill in 1959, Swift filled in and led the A's to a 13-2 record. He didn't get the job, however, when the A's let Craft go.

In 1965, Dressen suffered a heart attack during spring training and Swift led Detroit to a 24-18 record and third place before giving the reins back to Dressen.

This season, Dressen suffered a heart attack in May and the team compiled a 32 - 25 record before Swift was sidelined. Dressen died Aug. 10.

Swift played with the St. Louis Browns, the Philadelphia Athletics and the Tigers. He hit .231 in the majors and only 14 home runs. But the late Fred Hutchinson, a batterymate for a time, said, "I never had to shake Swift off."

Swift and Paul Richards split the catching chores during Detroit's run to the pennant in 1945.

"There was only one time in my career that I hit .300 and that was because I borrowed a base hit," Swift was fond of relating. "At Muskogee in my first year in the minors, I needed four for seven in the last doubleheader to finish at .300.

"I had three for seven during the day. But when the statistician came down to the locker room after the game, Walt Lacey, a pitcher, told him to give me credit for a single that Lacey hit earlier in the year.

"That's what he did and the record shows me hitting .300 for the season," Swift said.

Services will be held Wednesday in Detroit with burial Friday in Salina, Kan.

The funeral at Salina will be held at 2 p.m. at the Ryan Mortuary. Burial will be in Roselawn Memorial Park.

Swift's mother, Mrs. J. R. Swift, and a brother, Bruce Swift, live in Salina.

Basketball Rules Meetings Start Wednesday At Kennett

COLUMBIA – Basketball rules interpretation meetings have been scheduled for high school basketball officials and coaches at 29 sites over Missouri. The meetings are held each year as a part of the MSHSAA program for training officials and will start an all-day session for interpreters on Sunday, October 16, at the MSHSAA Office. The meeting for interpreters will be conducted by Jack W. Miles, Assistant Executive Secretary of the MSHSAA, who is in charge of the program for state officials. All rules interpreters will attend the session after which they will conduct meetings at the various sites assigned to them. The agenda for the October 16 meeting with the interpreters will include discussion of the 1966-67 basketball rules changes, current rules interpretations, officiating mechanics, and a planning session for the rules meetings.

Missouri high schools follow the rules as adopted by the National Basketball Committee of the United States and Canada. The various sports associations that participate in the writing of this rules code are the National Federation of State High School Athletic Associations, the NCAA, the NJCAA, the YMCA, and two Canadian basketball groups. The Missouri High School Activities Association is a member of the National Federation.

The rules changes for the 1966-67 season are primarily editorial in nature and will go unnoticed by the great majority of spectators. The few changes that have been made are a result of an effort by the rules committee to correlate the coverage of various rules within the code and to improve on the wording.

The following is the schedule for the MSHSAA rules interpretation meetings:

Cape Girardeau: SEMSC Gym October 24, at 7:30, Interpreter Bill Arment.

Kennett High School, October 17, at 7:30, Interpreter Bill Arment.

New Madrid High School, October 26, at 7:30, Interpreter Bill Arment.

Poplar Bluff High School, October 31, at 7:30, Interpreter Bill Arment.

(School for Interpreters) October 16, MSHSAA Office.

All meetings except those noted differently are scheduled on Central Standard Time. Meetings scheduled to start at 7:00 will include a session on girls rules.

All basketball officials registered with MSHSAA are required to attend one of the above meetings. Basketball coaches are also urged to attend.

CALGARY AP - The British Columbia Lions survived a last-ditch surge by Calgary and staved off the Stampeders 13-9 Monday night in a Canadian Football League game.

Hilltoppers Open Basketball Practice Session

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. - Four of the five starters who led Western Kentucky's basketball team to a 25-3 record last year opened practice for the 1966-67 season Monday.

The returning regulars are 6-5 guard Wayne Chapman, 6-3 forward Clem Haskins, and one of collegiate basketball's top brother combinations, 6-4 guard Dwight Smith and 6-6 forward Greg Smith.

In starting his third season at the helm of the Hilltoppers, Head Coach John Oldham and his staff see their most immediate problem as finding a replacement for graduated center Steve Cunningham, 6-5.

"We don't have an experienced collegiate center on the squad," said Oldham. "This may mean that some of our kids will be shifting positions to help take up the slack. There are several possible combinations and we'll be trying to find the right one in our early practice sessions."

Cunningham was the No. 3 scorer on last year's club that won the Ohio Valley Conference title and finished third in the NCAA Mid-East Regional tournament. He averaged 15.1 points per game, behind a 20.4 average for Haskins and a 16.1 mark for Dwight Smith.

Wayne Chapman scored at a 13.3 point-per-game clip and Greg Smith at 9.5. Greg also led the team in rebounds with an average of 10.3 per outing.

Top prospect up from last year's frosh is 6-1 guard Rich Hendrick. He led the yearling club in scoring with a 26.1 average.

All four of the returning regulars made at least one all-star team last year. Haskins was named the OVC's "Player of the Year" for the second straight season. He was also named to several All-American squads in addition to his berth on both the tournament and regular season ALL-OVC teams. He was again named Most Valuable Player in the league's holiday tournament and tied with Vanderbilt's Clyde Lee and and Army's Mike Silliman for MVP honor in the Vanderbilt Invitational Tournament.

Dwight Smith was also named to both the OVC's all-tourney squad and the regular season all-conference team. Chapman was picked for the All-OVC tourney team and the All-Mid-East Regional squad.

Greg Smith was a choice for the All-OVC regular season team.

Pilots Warned

ST. LOUIS AP - Helicopter pilots were warned by the Federal Aviation Agency Monday to not hover too close to the downtown Busch Memorial Stadium during sports contests.

The FAA warning came after an agency inspector, Thomas Murphy, saw one copter lingering near the rim of the bowl Sunday during the St. Louis Cardinals - Dallas Cowboys football game. More than 50,000 fans were in the stands.

Murphy said he talked to the pilot of the helicopter Monday and received the pilot's assurance the warning would be heeded.

Regulations require helicopter pilots "to conduct their flight in such a manner so that if there is an engine failure, they can land in an area so as not to pose a hazard to persons or property," Murphy said.

Football Bribe

WASHINGTON AP - The FBI announced today the arrest of a Louisiana man on charges of trying to bribe the backfield stars of the Louisiana State University football team.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover identified the man as Samuel Joseph Graziano, 26, of Baton Rouge.

Hoover said Graziano is charged with trying to influence the outcome of six LSU football games this autumn.

The FBI said its investigation was conducted with the cooperation of the three players involved-halfbacks Jim Dusay and Billy Masters, and fullback Gawain de Betta.

Hoover said Graziano, a barber, tried to bribe the players in connection with LSU football games with the University of South Carolina, Sept. 17; Rice University, Sept. 24; University of Miami, Florida, Oct. 1; Texas A&M, Oct. 8; University of Kentucky, Oct. 15; and the University of Florida to be played Oct. 22.

The FBI said Graziano would be arraigned before a U.S. commissioner at Baton Rouge.

If convicted, the maximum penalty on the sports bribery charge is a $10,000 fine or five years in jail, or both.

Hoover said Graziano is a partner in the Dalton Barbershop, Baton Rouge.

Graziano lives at 3313 Crestaire Drive, Baton Rouge.

John "A "Boog" Powell Honored

By MIKE RHEA

BALTIMORE (AP) — It's not that John (Boog) Powell isn't grateful and honored, but he hopes there will never be another reason to select him as Comeback Player of the Year in the American League.

"It's one award I don't want to win again," said Powell on Monday, when informed of his selection in The Associated Press poll. "I consider it an honor, but once is enough."

The 250-pound first baseman hit 34 homers in the regular season, had 109 runs batted in, and a .287 batting average. He polled 124 votes in the balloting by 312 baseball writers.

Powell was runner-up in RBI, third in homers and fourth in batting. In 1965, he hit only .248 with 17 homers and 72 runs batted in.

Another Oriole, shortstop Luis Aparicio, was second in the voting with 32 votes and California Angels hurler Jack Sanford was third with 27.

Aparicio, who has returned to his home in Venezuela for the winter, had threatened to retire following the 1965 season in which he batted .225. He claimed that his wife convinced him to make another try and he thanked her publicly at the end of this season. Aparicio batted .276 in 151 games for his best year since 1960, when he hit .277 for the Chicago White Sox.

Sanford compiled a 13-7 record for the Angels, pitching in 50 games, 45 in relief. Last year with San Francisco of the National League, the 37-year-old right-hander was 5-7. He had 24 victories for the Giants in 1962 and 16 in 1963. In 1964 he underwent elbow surgery.

KANSAS CITY AP) - The Kansas City Athletics sold outfielder Larry Stahl to the New York Mets Monday for an undisclosed sum.

Stahl, a native of Freeburg, Ill., spent all of last season with the A's. He hit .250 with five homers and 35 RBIs in 119 games.

Hilltoppers Open Basketball Practice Session

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. - Four of the five starters who led Western Kentucky's basketball team to a 25-3 record last year opened practice for the 1966-67 season Monday.

The returning regulars are 6-5 guard Wayne Chapman, 6-3 forward Clem Haskins, and one of collegiate basketball's top brother combinations, 6-4 guard Dwight Smith and 6-6 forward Greg Smith.

In starting his third season at the helm of the Hilltoppers, Head Coach John Oldham and his staff see their most immediate problem as finding a replacement for graduated center Steve Cunningham, 6-5.

"We don't have an experienced collegiate center on the squad," said Oldham. "This may mean that some of our kids will be shifting positions to help take up the slack. There are several possible combinations and we'll be trying to find the right one in our early practice sessions."

Cunningham was the No. 3 scorer on last year's club that won the Ohio Valley Conference title and finished third in the NCAA Mid-East Regional tournament. He averaged 15.1 points per game, behind a 20.4 average for Haskins and a 16.1 mark for Dwight Smith.

Wayne Chapman scored at a 13.3 point-per-game clip and Greg Smith at 9.5. Greg also led the team in rebounds with an average of 10.3 per outing.

Top prospect up from last year's frosh is 6-1 guard Rich Hendrick. He led the yearling club in scoring with a 26.1 average.

All four of the returning regulars made at least one all-star team last year. Haskins was named the OVC's "Player of the Year" for the second straight season. He was also named to several All-American squads in addition to his berth on both the tournament and regular season ALL-OVC teams. He was again named Most Valuable Player in the league's holiday tournament and tied with Vanderbilt's Clyde Lee and and Army's Mike Silliman for MVP honor in the Vanderbilt Invitational Tournament.

Dwight Smith was also named to both the OVC's all-tourney squad and the regular season all-conference team. Chapman was picked for the All-OVC tourney team and the All-Mid-East Regional squad.

Greg Smith was a choice for the All-OVC regular season team.

Pilots Warned

ST. LOUIS AP - Helicopter pilots were warned by the Federal Aviation Agency Monday to not hover too close to the downtown Busch Memorial Stadium during sports contests.

The FAA warning came after an agency inspector, Thomas Murphy, saw one copter lingering near the rim of the bowl Sunday during the St. Louis Cardinals - Dallas Cowboys football game. More than 50,000 fans were in the stands.

Murphy said he talked to the pilot of the helicopter Monday and received the pilot's assurance the warning would be heeded.

Regulations require helicopter pilots "to conduct their flight in such a manner so that if there is an engine failure, they can land in an area so as not to pose a hazard to persons or property," Murphy said.

Football Bribe

WASHINGTON AP - The FBI announced today the arrest of a Louisiana man on charges of trying to bribe the backfield stars of the Louisiana State University football team.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover identified the man as Samuel Joseph Graziano, 26, of Baton Rouge.

Hoover said Graziano is charged with trying to influence the outcome of six LSU football games this autumn.

The FBI said its investigation was conducted with the cooperation of the three players involved-halfbacks Jim Dusay and Billy Masters, and fullback Gawain de Betta.

Hoover said Graziano, a barber, tried to bribe the players in connection with LSU football games with the University of South Carolina, Sept. 17; Rice University, Sept. 24; University of Miami, Florida, Oct. 1; Texas A&M, Oct. 8; University of Kentucky, Oct. 15; and the University of Florida to be played Oct. 22.

The FBI said Graziano would be arraigned before a U.S. commissioner at Baton Rouge.

If convicted, the maximum penalty on the sports bribery charge is a $10,000 fine or five years in jail, or both.

Hoover said Graziano is a partner in the Dalton Barbershop, Baton Rouge.

Graziano lives at 3313 Crestaire Drive, Baton Rouge.

Swift's Services Wednesday

DETROIT (AP) — Bob Swift, baseball's greatest pinch-manager, died Monday of lung cancer. He was 51.

Swift, a one-time major league catcher, posted winning records twice with the Detroit Tigers and once with the Kansas City Athletics when called to the manager's job on an interim basis because of illnesses.

This past season he took over the Tigers a second time when Manager Charlie Dressen suffered his second heart attack. Swift himself had to be relieved shortly after the All-Star game. He entered a hospital for a stomach ailment and it was found he had lung cancer.

Frank Skaff piloted the Tigers to the end of the season and then Mayo Smith was named to the post.

When Harry Craft became ill in 1959, Swift filled in and led the A's to a 13-2 record. He didn't get the job, however, when the A's let Craft go.

In 1965, Dressen suffered a heart attack during spring training and Swift led Detroit to a 24-18 record and third place before giving the reins back to Dressen.

This season, Dressen suffered a heart attack in May and the team compiled a 32 - 25 record before Swift was sidelined. Dressen died Aug. 10.

Swift played with the St. Louis Browns, the Philadelphia Athletics and the Tigers. He hit .231 in the majors and only 14 home runs. But the late Fred Hutchinson, a batterymate for a time, said, "I never had to shake Swift off."

Swift and Paul Richards split the catching chores during Detroit's run to the pennant in 1945.

"There was only one time in my career that I hit .300 and that was because I borrowed a base hit," Swift was fond of relating. "At Muskogee in my first year in the minors, I needed four for seven in the last doubleheader to finish at .300.

"I had three for seven during the day. But when the statistician came down to the locker room after the game, Walt Lacey, a pitcher, told him to give me credit for a single that Lacey hit earlier in the year.

"That's what he did and the record shows me hitting .300 for the season," Swift said.

Services will be held Wednesday in Detroit with burial Friday in Salina, Kan.

The funeral at Salina will be held at 2 p.m. at the Ryan Mortuary. Burial will be in Roselawn Memorial Park.

Swift's mother, Mrs. J. R. Swift, and a brother, Bruce Swift, live in Salina.

John "A "Boog" Powell Honored

By MIKE RHEA

BALTIMORE (AP) — It's not that John (Boog) Powell isn't grateful and honored, but he hopes there will never be another reason to select him as Comeback Player of the Year in the American League.

"It's one award I don't want to win again," said Powell on Monday, when informed of his selection in The Associated Press poll. "I consider it an honor, but once is enough."

The 250-pound first baseman hit 34 homers in the regular season, had 109 runs batted in, and a .287 batting average. He polled 124 votes in the balloting by 312 baseball writers.

Powell was runner-up in RBI, third in homers and fourth in batting. In 1965, he hit only .248 with 17 homers and 72 runs batted in.

Another Oriole, shortstop Luis Aparicio, was second in the voting with 32 votes and California Angels hurler Jack Sanford was third with 27.

Aparicio, who has returned to his home in Venezuela for the winter, had threatened to retire following the 1965 season in which he batted .225. He claimed that his wife convinced him to make another try and he thanked her publicly at the end of this season. Aparicio batted .276 in 151 games for his best year since 1960, when he hit .277 for the Chicago White Sox.

Sanford compiled a 13-7 record for the Angels, pitching in 50 games, 45 in relief. Last year with San Francisco of the National League, the 37-year-old right-hander was 5-7. He had 24 victories for the Giants in 1962 and 16 in 1963. In 1964 he underwent elbow surgery.

KANSAS CITY AP) - The Kansas City Athletics sold outfielder Larry Stahl to the New York Mets Monday for an undisclosed sum.

Stahl, a native of Freeburg, Ill., spent all of last season with the A's. He hit .250 with five homers and 35 RBIs in 119 games.

Basketball Rules Meetings Start Wednesday At Kennett

COLUMBIA - Basketball rules interpretation meetings have been scheduled for high school basketball officials and coaches at 29 sites over Missouri. The meetings are held each year as a part of the MSHSAA program for training officials and will start an all-day session for interpreters on Sunday, October 16, at the MSHSAA Office. The meeting for interpreters will be conducted by Jack W. Miles, Assistant Executive Secretary of the MSHSAA, who is in charge of the program for state officials. All rules interpreters will attend the session after which they will conduct meetings at the various sites assigned to them. The agenda for the October 16 meeting with the interpreters will include discussion of the 1966-67 basketball rules changes, current rules interpretations, officiating mechanics, and a planning session for the rules meetings.

Missouri high schools follow the rules as adopted by the National Basketball Committee of the United States and Canada. The various sports associations that participate in the writing of this rules code are the National Federation of State High School Athletic Associations, the NCAA, the NJCAA, the YMCA, and two Canadian basketball groups. The Missouri High School Activities Association is a member of the National Federation.

The rules changes for the 1966-67 season are primarily editorial in nature and will go unnoticed by the great majority of spectators. The few changes that have been made are a result of an effort by the rules committee to correlate the coverage of various rules within the code and to improve on the wording.

The following is the schedule for the MSHSAA rules interpretation meetings:

Cape Girardeau: SEMSC Gym October 24, at 7:30, Interpreter Bill Arment.

Kennett High School, October 17, at 7:30, Interpreter Bill Arment.

New Madrid High School, October 26, at 7:30, Interpreter Bill Arment.

Poplar Bluff High School, October 31, at 7:30, Interpreter Bill Arment.

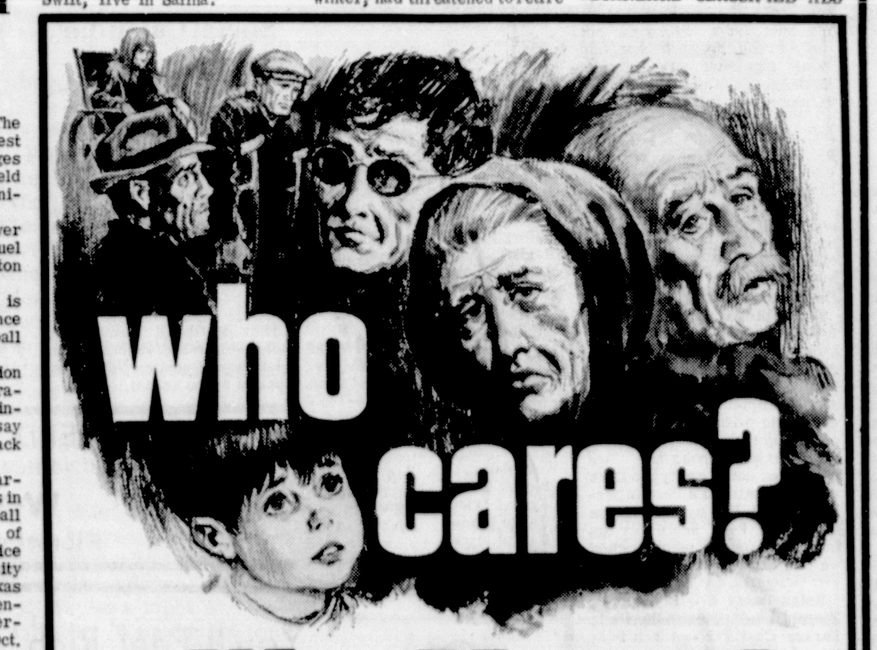

(School for Interpreters) October 16, MSHSAA Office.

All meetings except those noted differently are scheduled on Central Standard Time. Meetings scheduled to start at 7:00 will include a session on girls rules.

All basketball officials registered with MSHSAA are required to attend one of the above meetings. Basketball coaches are also urged to attend.

CALGARY AP - The British Columbia Lions survived a last-ditch surge by Calgary and staved off the Stampeders 13-9 Monday night in a Canadian Football League game.

New in Home Sewing: Chainstitching

GROWING UP—This cotton plaid school dress is made with an eye to the future. Growth tucks chain-stitched into the skirt can be "zipped" out when it's time to let the hem down. For even tucks, follow line of the plaid. New chain-stitch is done on Singer's Touch 'n Sew machine.

PARTY-GOER—Lace bands add a decorative touch to this cotton velveteen party dress. They also hide growth tucks that allow easy skirt lengthening. The tucks are done with Singer's new chain-stitch that zips out easily and leaves no marks. Dress designed by Helen Lee for McCall's Patterns.

Think you can't sew a fine seam? Sure you can.

Today, it's easy to make long, straight seams as well as gathers, appliques, smocking, and buttonholes.

You and a modern sewing machine can do all these things with ease . . . accomplishing in minutes what once took hours of painstaking handwork.

Latest innovation in mechanical sewing aids is a machine that does chainstitching—plus straight and zig-zag. The single-thread stitch looks like straight stitching on top but has interlocking loops underneath. It can be removed with a pull on the thread end. The chain-stitch eliminates the need for hand-basting. It's ideal for sewing decorative trim on curtains, and for making temporary growth tucks in little girls' dresses.

Modern mechanical aids aren't the only reasons sewing today is both easy and fun. Other incentives are the wealth of beautiful, easy-to-care-for fabrics and the individually sized patterns available.

Grandmother often had to be content with sewing calico or muslin into a garment, using a crude paper outline as her pattern. Today you can use couturier designed patterns with step-by-step instructions. Your choice of fabrics ranges from rugged wide wale cotton corduroy to elegant, machine-washable cotton velveteen in exotic prints and rich colors.

IT'S NEW—Home seamstresses can now do chainstitching by machine. A single thread stitch with interlocking loops underneath, it's used for basting and other temporary sewing that formerly had to be done by hand. Available on Singer's Touch 'n Sew machine that also does straight and zigzag stitching.

Symington Praises Role of Congress

JOPLIN - Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) said in a speech prepared for delivery tonight that no Congress in recent history has acted with more intent and desire to see that all Americans share in the tremendous and growing wealth of this country. Symington spoke at a Democratic dinner honoring Arch Skelton, Democratic candidate for the U.S. Congress from the 7th District.

Pointing out that the United States is now in its sixth consecutive year of great economic upsurge, unmatched in the Free World, Symington said: "Under a Democratic Administration our country is enjoying the fastest rate of growth of any democratic, industrialized nation. At the same time, we have undertaken new domestic programs to improve the life of millions of Americans who have not shared in this wealth."

Symington said these important and necessary programs should be developed in harmony with an equally important consideration: "maintaining the integrity of the dollar."

In recognition of the monetary and fiscal responsibilities of the United States, Symington said he supported at a level consistent with sound economic growth many major programs enacted by the 89th Congress.

Among the achievements of this Congress, now in session for the 84th week, Symington pointed to the programs providing aid to states and communities to help them develop better educational opportunities, better health facilities and better environment.

"In the war to eliminate the ills of poverty and disease, however, it is necessary to combat the underlying causes," Symington said, pointing to long - range economic planning as one example:

"The problems of poverty, inadequate education and inadequate job opportunities do not respect geographic lines. It was with this realization that Governors and leaders of neighboring states began to work together to solve mutual problems. This spirit of cooperation led to the concept of partnership between the states and the federal government, with the federal government helping to provide funds to combat the problems outlined by the states."

One such region is the Ozarks, including parts of Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma, now designated by the Secretary of Commerce as the Ozarks Development Region.

Symington noted that the Ozarks Region is rich with natural resources and potential but relies on a few basic industries and agriculture. "These are failing to provide the economic base necessary to self - sustaining growth," Symington said.

"In this region, population and employment are dropping rapidly. Farm employment has declined almost 60% from 1950 to 1960. Manufacturing employment is up. In the last decade it increased by 39,945. This is not sufficient however to offset the drop in agricultural employment which has decreased by 142,000."

Symington said that in an effort to stimulate the development of the resources of the region and to build up a diversified economic base, he and a number of Congressional representatives from the three states had joined in an appeal to the President for earnest consideration of legislation they plan to introduce in the new Congress. It would authorize $681 million to be appropriated over a five-year period to assist the region in meeting its special problems and promoting lasting economic development.

"This may seem to some a very large figure," Symington said, adding, "It is. But consider it in perspective. In recent hearings in the Senate, the Mayor of New York estimated that it would require at least $50 BILLION in the next decade to alleviate the problems of that one city alone.

"Consider also that the sound economic development of the Ozarks region could reverse the population trend in the area, slow down the migration to the major population centers and thus reduce the cost and the problems of the ills of the cities."

Symington observed that the cost must also be considered in the light of the tremendous benefits foreseen. He said cooperating leaders of the region have indicated urgent need for additional highways to stimulate industrial potential where lack of adequate access inhibits commercial growth and to serve recreational, residential and educational areas.

In the view of the State and local leaders and the Missouri Senator, other requirements for the area included expanded health and medical facilities; conservation and development of water resources; improved waterways and ports; prevention of water pollution; research and development of timber quality and productivity; rehabilitation of areas scarred by abandoned mines and restoration of fish and wildlife to these areas; expanded vocational educational opportunities.

"The Ozarks Regional Development program can be the most challenging and rewarding task ever undertaken in this area," Symington said. "Success depends upon the desires and efforts of the people and the communities of the region for the federal assistance will be on a sharing basis."

Symington said development of the region depended upon the pressed through the leaders they chose locally, in the State Legislature and in the United States Congress. Endorsing Arch Skelton for Representative from the 7th Congressional District, Symington said: "The tremendous opportunity which lies at the threshold demands men of energy and dynamic purpose, men such as Arch Skelton who will join with other Missouri delegates in a united effort toward the goals we all want to achieve for Missouri and America.

"Many of us have known and worked with Arch for several years as a private citizen who has worked for the betterment of this region. In the Congress of the United States, Arch Skelton could make an even greater contribution, working for the overall benefit of this District of Missouri."

Long Praises Farm Spirit Of Progress

WASHINGTON -- U. S. Sen. Edward V. Long (D-Mo) today said "a spirit of progress in our rural areas is beginning to sweep away the fear that farm communities are doomed to economic stagnation."

The senator spoke at a luncheon in Kansas City honoring the "Farmer of the Year." The luncheon was sponsored by the Sartoma club.

Senator Long predicted that U. S. farmers will produce $48 billion in farm goods this year -- $10 billion more than in 1960 -- and praised the farmer who he said, "is the hero in our long fight for the farmer's right to parity of income."

Senator Long cited facts showing progress in Missouri's agriculture. This year, Senator Long said, Missouri's farmers will produce:

-- A $40 million bushel wheat crop.

-- A record $200 million soybean crop.

-- Cattle and hogs valued at over $625 million dollars.

Senator Long said Missouri has received a record $52 million in Farmers Home Administration loans this year to help with rural housing, farm ownership water systems, sewer development, and to help recover from floods and storms.

"We have strengthened the agricultural conservation program," Senator Long said. "It will invest $8,600,000 in conservation of soil, water, timber and wildlife in Missouri next year."

The Senator said "Missouri's share of agricultural research funds has increased 25 percent since 1961."

"We have expanded the rural community development program under which Missouri has now completed 1,091 rural development projects," the Senator said.

Long said, "the Soil Conservation Service has been helping nearly 32,000 Missourians install soil and water conservation systems. These are helping bring growth and new industry to rural Missouri."

"The U.S. Forest Service last year planted 2,600,000 more trees in Missouri than they did back in 1960," he said.

"Congress has just approved appropriations this year of $39,000,000 for flood control projects in Missouri. We have long known here in Missouri that an adequate water supply is essential in attracting industry to move to our State," Senator Long said.

CROSS IN THE WINDOW

It was a little house and weather gray,
Devoid of splendor and of loveliness,
But in the window I could see a cross,
Touched with the light, that well-remembered day.
And in those moments as I lingered there,
I felt a glow of worship and of prayer.

Thou knowest, Lord, that I am lowly, too,
Without the gifts of beauty and of charm,
And scarred with many a sorrow-laden storm;
But, Lord, I pray that someone looking through
The window of my humble life may see
A cross, and life a shining prayer to Thee!

99-Year-Old Indian Claims Land in Name of Ancestors

BALTIMORE, Md. AP -- Charles Wolf, 99, a Navajo Indian chief from Harrisburg, Pa., tried to claim a piece of land in the name of his ancestors but the settlers won again.

The land Wolf picked out was the Greyhound bus station in Baltimore. He told Judge Howard L. Aaron in Municipal Court he was waiting for a friend when police tried to eject him.

"I'm an American Indian," the chief told police. "You're not going to push me anywhere because this is my land."

Police arrested him for disorderly conduct, but Judge Aaron dismissed the charge.

"I'd be proud to be charged with disorderly conduct at your age," Judge Aaron said.

The chief said he was a lecturer.

"What do you lecture on?" the judge asked

"Anything you want to hear," replied Wolf.

I believe in God as I believe in my friends, because I feel the breath of his affection, feel his invisible and intangible hand, drawing me, leading me, grasping me.

Decision Near on Cotton Research Referendum

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Agriculture Department may decide in about two weeks whether to conduct a grower referendum on a proposed multimillion dollar cotton research and promotion program.

The agency set an Oct. 28 deadline for suggested regulations which would govern the referendum.

The voting, if held, probably would be in early December, possibly Dec. 5-9, when growers will vote on 1967 cotton marketing quotas.

The program faces staunch opposition from the American Farm Bureau Federation, a private farm organization with strong support in cotton - producing states. It is favored by the National Cotton Council, an industry organization.

If approved, the program would be financed by an assessment of $1 a bale on cotton producers and would go into effect with the 1967 crop.

Symington Praises Role of Congress

JOPLIN - Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) said in a speech prepared for delivery tonight that no Congress in recent history has acted with more intent and desire to see that all Americans share in the tremendous and growing wealth of this country. Symington spoke at a Democratic dinner honoring Arch Skelton, Democratic candidate for the U.S. Congress from the 7th District.

Pointing out that the United States is now in its sixth consecutive year of great economic upsurge, unmatched in the Free World, Symington said: "Under a Democratic Administration our country is enjoying the fastest rate of growth of any democratic, industrialized nation. At the same time, we have undertaken new domestic programs to improve the life of millions of Americans who have not shared in this wealth."

Symington said these important and necessary programs should be developed in harmony with an equally important consideration: "maintaining the integrity of the dollar."

In recognition of the monetary and fiscal responsibilities of the United States, Symington said he supported at a level consistent with sound economic growth many major programs enacted by the 89th Congress.

Among the achievements of this Congress, now in session for the 84th week, Symington pointed to the programs providing aid to states and communities to help them develop better educational opportunities, better health facilities and better environment.

"In the war to eliminate the ills of poverty and disease, however, it is necessary to combat the underlying causes," Symington said, pointing to long - range economic planning as one example:

"The problems of poverty, inadequate education and inadequate job opportunities do not respect geographic lines. It was with this realization that Governors and leaders of neighboring states began to work together to solve mutual problems. This spirit of cooperation led to the concept of partnership between the states and the federal government, with the federal government helping to provide funds to combat the problems outlined by the states."

One such region is the Ozarks, including parts of Missouri, Arkansas and Oklahoma, now designated by the Secretary of Commerce as the Ozarks Development Region.

Symington noted that the Ozarks Region is rich with natural resources and potential but relies on a few basic industries and agriculture. "These are failing to provide the economic base necessary to self - sustaining growth," Symington said.

"In this region, population and employment are dropping rapidly. Farm employment has declined almost 60% from 1950 to 1960. Manufacturing employment is up. In the last decade it increased by 39,945. This is not sufficient however to offset the drop in agricultural employment which has decreased by 142,000."

Symington said that in an effort to stimulate the development of the resources of the region and to build up a diversified economic base, he and a number of Congressional representatives from the three states had joined in an appeal to the President for earnest consideration of legislation they plan to introduce in the new Congress. It would authorize $681 million to be appropriated over a five-year period to assist the region in meeting its special problems and promoting lasting economic development.

"This may seem to some a very large figure," Symington said, adding, "It is. But consider it in perspective. In recent hearings in the Senate, the Mayor of New York estimated that it would require at least $50 BILLION in the next decade to alleviate the problems of that one city alone.

"Consider also that the sound economic development of the Ozarks region could reverse the population trend in the area, slow down the migration to the major population centers and thus reduce the cost and the problems of the ills of the cities."

Symington observed that the cost must also be considered in the light of the tremendous benefits foreseen. He said cooperating leaders of the region have indicated urgent need for additional highways to stimulate industrial potential where lack of adequate access inhibits commercial growth and to serve recreational, residential and educational areas.

In the view of the State and local leaders and the Missouri Senator, other requirements for the area included expanded health and medical facilities; conservation and development of water resources; improved waterways and ports; prevention of water pollution; research and development of timber quality and productivity; rehabilitation of areas scarred by abandoned mines and restoration of fish and wildlife to these areas; expanded vocational educational opportunities.

"The Ozarks Regional Development program can be the most challenging and rewarding task ever undertaken in this area," Symington said. "Success depends upon the desires and efforts of the people and the communities of the region for the federal assistance will be on a sharing basis."

Symington said development of the region depended upon the pressed through the leaders they chose locally, in the State Legislature and in the United States Congress. Endorsing Arch Skelton for Representative from the 7th Congressional District, Symington said: "The tremendous opportunity which lies at the threshold demands men of energy and dynamic purpose, men such as Arch Skelton who will join with other Missouri delegates in a united effort toward the goals we all want to achieve for Missouri and America.

"Many of us have known and worked with Arch for several years as a private citizen who has worked for the betterment of this region. In the Congress of the United States, Arch Skelton could make an even greater contribution, working for the overall benefit of this District of Missouri."

Long Praises Farm Spirit Of Progress

WASHINGTON -- U. S. Sen. Edward V. Long (D-Mo) today said "a spirit of progress in our rural areas is beginning to sweep away the fear that farm communities are doomed to economic stagnation."

The senator spoke at a luncheon in Kansas City honoring the "Farmer of the Year." The luncheon was sponsored by the Sartoma club.

Senator Long predicted that U. S. farmers will produce $48 billion in farm goods this year -- $10 billion more than in 1960 -- and praised the farmer who he said, "is the hero in our long fight for the farmer's right to parity of income."

Senator Long cited facts showing progress in Missouri's agriculture. This year, Senator Long said, Missouri's farmers will produce:

-- A $40 million bushel wheat crop.

-- A record $200 million soybean crop.

-- Cattle and hogs valued at over $625 million dollars.

Senator Long said Missouri has received a record $52 million in Farmers Home Administration loans this year to help with rural housing, farm ownership water systems, sewer development, and to help recover from floods and storms.

"We have strengthened the agricultural conservation program," Senator Long said. "It will invest $8,600,000 in conservation of soil, water, timber and wildlife in Missouri next year."

The Senator said "Missouri's share of agricultural research funds has increased 25 percent since 1961."

"We have expanded the rural community development program under which Missouri has now completed 1,091 rural development projects," the Senator said.

Long said, "the Soil Conservation Service has been helping nearly 32,000 Missourians install soil and water conservation systems. These are helping bring growth and new industry to rural Missouri."

"The U.S. Forest Service last year planted 2,600,000 more trees in Missouri than they did back in 1960," he said.

"Congress has just approved appropriations this year of $39,000,000 for flood control projects in Missouri. We have long known here in Missouri that an adequate water supply is essential in attracting industry to move to our State," Senator Long said.

CROSS IN THE WINDOW

It was a little house and weather gray,
Devoid of splendor and of loveliness,
But in the window I could see a cross,
Touched with the light, that well-remembered day.
And in those moments as I lingered there,
I felt a glow of worship and of prayer.

Thou knowest, Lord, that I am lowly, too,
Without the gifts of beauty and of charm,
And scarred with many a sorrow-laden storm;
But, Lord, I pray that someone looking through
The window of my humble life may see
A cross, and life a shining prayer to Thee!

99-Year-Old Indian Claims Land in Name of Ancestors

BALTIMORE, Md. AP -- Charles Wolf, 99, a Navajo Indian chief from Harrisburg, Pa., tried to claim a piece of land in the name of his ancestors but the settlers won again.

The land Wolf picked out was the Greyhound bus station in Baltimore. He told Judge Howard L. Aaron in Municipal Court he was waiting for a friend when police tried to eject him.

"I'm an American Indian," the chief told police. "You're not going to push me anywhere because this is my land."

Police arrested him for disorderly conduct, but Judge Aaron dismissed the charge.

"I'd be proud to be charged with disorderly conduct at your age," Judge Aaron said.

The chief said he was a lecturer.

"What do you lecture on?" the judge asked

"Anything you want to hear," replied Wolf.

I believe in God as I believe in my friends, because I feel the breath of his affection, feel his invisible and intangible hand, drawing me, leading me, grasping me.

Bonds Getting Play From Middle Income Investors

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)--Once Considered the solace of wealthy, coupon- clipping widows, corporate and municipal bonds now are beginning to accumulate in the safe deposit boxes of middle-income investors.

The reasons are safety and yield. Bonds have a long record of security, most of them coming through the Great Depression without default. Their yield, or interest, is the highest in years. And tax exemptions on some make the rate even higher.

Tight money is spurring improving bond yields. Some banks, which had been big buyers of municipal bonds, appear to be selling now to raise cash for high-return business loans.

Lewis Schellbach, senior vice president of Standard & Poor's Corp., believes a trend has begun—that the investors with small and middle-size incomes will continue to include bonds with stocks in their portfolios.

"There are more of them buying bonds now than ever before," he said. "They'll stay with bonds, too, once they realize the beauty of them—the safety and the yield."

Since a bond represents debt, or money you have lent a government or company, the ability to repay determines the rating. A stock, on the other hand, represents ownership in a corporation.

Good municipal bonds now yield the buyer around 3.80 per cent interest. Since these bonds generally are used to build public facilities such as sewers or water systems, they are tax free.

Corporate bonds also offer high interest. The best rates now average about 5.40 per cent —one of the best returns to be found even without any tax benefits.

Assuming you have the proper knowledge, advice and money, you may approach the situation by telling the broker the quality and maturity you wish to buy.

Bonds are not as easy to purchase as are stocks. If you buy a bond you usually hold on to it for five to 30 years. There is little turnover, and the average broker selom pushes them.

Bonds also come in much larger denominations than stocks. Typically they have a face amount of $1,000, although a few denominations may be in multiples of $100.

When the term of the bond is completed, the days of interest are over. The issuer redeems the security at its face value by returning your original investment. Your reward for the loan has been the interest.

Injured Boy Shoots Self To Ease Pain

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — An 11-year-old boy, lost in the woods and wounded by a ricocheting bullet, shot himself in the temple because "I couldn't stand the pain no longer."

However, Billy Painter was found, rushed to a hospital for emergency surgery and early today was reported in fair condition.

Billy, the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Painter of Decatur, had gone into the mountains of northwest Georgia with his father, a younger brother and an uncle for a weekend hunting trip. Painter said Billy left the camp early Sunday to shoot squirrels.

Painter said his son told rescuers "he shot at a squirrel and the bullet glanced and hit him above the right eye."

When he didn't return in a short while, the father said, a search was started. The search was enlarged by volunteers later but Billy wasn't found until early Monday, still conscious in a wooded area about a mile from the camp site.

Painter said the boy told rescuers that he had given up hope of ever being found and that he had placed his .22 caliber rifle against his temple and fired because of the intense pain from the earlier wound above his right eye.

Discharged Servicemen to Get New Chance

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson has signed a bill he says offers new hope to persons discharged from the armed forces under conditions other than honorable.

"Thanks to this measure, they will now have an opportunity to rehabilitate their reputations by exemplary conduct in civilian life," Johnson said in a statement announcing his weekend action.

The new law permits a discharged serviceman to obtain an exemplary rehabilitation certificate whenever he can show he has led an exemplary life for at least three years since the date of his discharge.

The purpose is to lessen the handicap, both to reputation and to employment, which such persons often suffer.

The certificates, to be issued by the secretary of labor, are available to persons who received general discharges as well as those under conditions other than honorable.

Statements of law enforcement officers, employers and others would be accepted as evidence to justify issuance of the certificates.

Noting that there are about 500,000 veterans with such discharges, Johnson said "Many of them were young and immature at the time of their offense or failure. Yet, they cannot rid themselves of this blot on their record no matter how admirable a life they may lead."

INSPIRATION

Every father and family man knows,
That for keeping him on his toes,
Nothing yet beats debt.
Something better he has yet to devise
For waking him in the morning, and making him rise.
Sleepy-eyed, disgruntled, befuddled or dizzy,
He must get up -- and he must get busy!
Baby needs new shoes; daughter, a frock.
Keep an eye on the clock!
Minutes are money; a day is a dollar.
No rest for the weary, when hungry mouths holler.
For this it is two bits; for that, it's a buck.

Rest from his labors? (There ain't no such luck!
So ---
Sing a doleful song to debt.
(The kids their clothes are outgrowing.)
Nothing better has been invented yet,
For keeping a poor man going!

Bonds Getting Play From Middle Income Investors

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP)--Once Considered the solace of wealthy, coupon- clipping widows, corporate and municipal bonds now are beginning to accumulate in the safe deposit boxes of middle-income investors.

The reasons are safety and yield. Bonds have a long record of security, most of them coming through the Great Depression without default. Their yield, or interest, is the highest in years. And tax exemptions on some make the rate even higher.

Tight money is spurring improving bond yields. Some banks, which had been big buyers of municipal bonds, appear to be selling now to raise cash for high-return business loans.

Lewis Schellbach, senior vice president of Standard & Poor's Corp., believes a trend has begun—that the investors with small and middle-size incomes will continue to include bonds with stocks in their portfolios.

"There are more of them buying bonds now than ever before," he said. "They'll stay with bonds, too, once they realize the beauty of them—the safety and the yield."

Since a bond represents debt, or money you have lent a government or company, the ability to repay determines the rating. A stock, on the other hand, represents ownership in a corporation.

Good municipal bonds now yield the buyer around 3.80 per cent interest. Since these bonds generally are used to build public facilities such as sewers or water systems, they are tax free.

Corporate bonds also offer high interest. The best rates now average about 5.40 per cent —one of the best returns to be found even without any tax benefits.

Assuming you have the proper knowledge, advice and money, you may approach the situation by telling the broker the quality and maturity you wish to buy.

Bonds are not as easy to purchase as are stocks. If you buy a bond you usually hold on to it for five to 30 years. There is little turnover, and the average broker selom pushes them.

Bonds also come in much larger denominations than stocks. Typically they have a face amount of $1,000, although a few denominations may be in multiples of $100.

When the term of the bond is completed, the days of interest are over. The issuer redeems the security at its face value by returning your original investment. Your reward for the loan has been the interest.

Injured Boy Shoots Self To Ease Pain

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — An 11-year-old boy, lost in the woods and wounded by a ricocheting bullet, shot himself in the temple because "I couldn't stand the pain no longer."

However, Billy Painter was found, rushed to a hospital for emergency surgery and early today was reported in fair condition.

Billy, the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Painter of Decatur, had gone into the mountains of northwest Georgia with his father, a younger brother and an uncle for a weekend hunting trip. Painter said Billy left the camp early Sunday to shoot squirrels.

Painter said his son told rescuers "he shot at a squirrel and the bullet glanced and hit him above the right eye."

When he didn't return in a short while, the father said, a search was started. The search was enlarged by volunteers later but Billy wasn't found until early Monday, still conscious in a wooded area about a mile from the camp site.

Painter said the boy told rescuers that he had given up hope of ever being found and that he had placed his .22 caliber rifle against his temple and fired because of the intense pain from the earlier wound above his right eye.

Discharged Servicemen to Get New Chance

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson has signed a bill he says offers new hope to persons discharged from the armed forces under conditions other than honorable.

"Thanks to this measure, they will now have an opportunity to rehabilitate their reputations by exemplary conduct in civilian life," Johnson said in a statement announcing his weekend action.

The new law permits a discharged serviceman to obtain an exemplary rehabilitation certificate whenever he can show he has led an exemplary life for at least three years since the date of his discharge.

The purpose is to lessen the handicap, both to reputation and to employment, which such persons often suffer.

The certificates, to be issued by the secretary of labor, are available to persons who received general discharges as well as those under conditions other than honorable.

Statements of law enforcement officers, employers and others would be accepted as evidence to justify issuance of the certificates.

Noting that there are about 500,000 veterans with such discharges, Johnson said "Many of them were young and immature at the time of their offense or failure. Yet, they cannot rid themselves of this blot on their record no matter how admirable a life they may lead."

INSPIRATION

Every father and family man knows,
That for keeping him on his toes,
Nothing yet beats debt.
Something better he has yet to devise
For waking him in the morning, and making him rise.
Sleepy-eyed, disgruntled, befuddled or dizzy,
He must get up -- and he must get busy!
Baby needs new shoes; daughter, a frock.
Keep an eye on the clock!
Minutes are money; a day is a dollar.
No rest for the weary, when hungry mouths holler.
For this it is two bits; for that, it's a buck.

Rest from his labors? (There ain't no such luck!
So ---
Sing a doleful song to debt.
(The kids their clothes are outgrowing.)
Nothing better has been invented yet,
For keeping a poor man going!

Gerald Baggett

What's an education good for anyway?

Just a lot of practical things . . . like a good job, a good salary, and a better share of the good things in life. You wouldn't want to do without any of them. But you may be forced to . . . if you settle for less than a good education.

Don't kid yourself. A good education isn't a luxury today. It's an absolute necessity. With most employers, a good education is the first requirement for a good job . . . a good paying job . . . a job with a good future.

So, if you're in school now . . . stay there! Learn all you can for as long as you can. If you're out of school, you can still get plenty of valuable training outside the classroom. Find out about it. Visit the Youth Counsellor at your State Employment Service.

To get a good job, get a good education

The Church of the Nazarene has accomplished a splendid work the past year, having drawn a fine increase in membership, added 100 to the Sunday School, and handled more than $32,000 in the various activities of the church. So great has been the growth of the church that the present church house has proved inadequate and a new church is to be built where the old one stood.

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I was touched by the letter from the teen-agers who bought an orchid for their mother only to be told, "What a foolish thing to do. Where in the world am I going to wear an orchid? To the supermarket?"

I had the same kind of a mother and it nearly wrecked my life. When I was six I found a dime on the street. I went to the candy store and looked at all the goodies for about 20 minutes. Then I decided I would rather buy some buttons for my mother because the ones on her best dress didn't match.

When I gave Mom the buttons, she screamed at me. The buttons were the wrong size and the wrong color and I was a dumb kid. That was the story of my childhood -- rejection, belittling, getting yelled at.

I was determined that my children would never suffer as I did. Last week when my 5-year-old presented me with a dried up pansy, I pinned it on my dress and wore it to the market. Alice was so pleased she beamed all day.

I'm clipping that orchid letter as a reminder, Ann. Thank you so much for printing it. -- A LOVING MOTHER

Dear Mother: Thank you for reminding us all, once again, how important it is for parents to be aware of a child's need for praise and approval. With love and acceptance children blossom. Without it they wither and die.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have always had a better than average marriage. Our children are grown and we have grandchildren.

A relative lost her husband several months ago and Earl and I decided to ask her to live with us. We have plenty of room here and we have always enjoyed this person as a guest.

Well, ever since she moved in, I have felt like an outsider in my own home. It is nothing SHE does, it's Earl. He addresses all his remarks to her and the two of them talk right past me, as if I were a wall decoration.

At supper tonight he said, "There is one piece of meat left. Helen, you and I will split it." Whenever Earl and I go any place we invite Helen. She never refuses so now we are like triplets. Please tell me what to do. This arrangement is keeping me up nights. -- TOO BIG HEARTED

Dear Big Heart: Discuss the lady who came to dinner, with your clergyman and ask HIM to talk to Earl. When he hears from an authority that his marriage is in jeopardy because of this gleesome threesome he will agree that Helen must find another place to live. I hope.

From Your STATE CAPITOL

TAX COMMISSION SEEKS EQUALIZED ASSESSMENT

Jefferson City -- A citizen in a Missouri county goes to his assessor and finds that his Nash automobile is assessed for $900. He then inquires about a friend who lives in the next county who owns a 1965 Cadillac and finds it assessed at $500. The Nash owner is paying almost twice as much in taxes on his car as his neighbor, but what can be done?

Judge Hunter Phillips, chairman of the Missouri State Tax Commission, already has begun to remedy this and similar situations of unequal tax assessments on automobiles and boats in 48 of Missouri's 114 counties where assessors were failing to meet their obligations.

Raises in personal property items has already brought an estimated $400,000,000 in assessed valuation to county tax tolls in Missouri, Phillips said. The tax revenue from these assessments does not go to the state, but to the counties in which it is assessed. Most of it will go to schools, Phillips said, since this is generally the largest levy in each county.

Automobiles and boats are not the only items which are not equally assessed, Phillips said. Real property such as land and buildings have long been out of line in many counties due to the failure of county assessors to keep up with land sales and accurately keep tabs on the property in their counties.

Some of the examples of low assessment can be attributed to favoritism, but much of it is due to carelessness and a lack of aggressiveness by assesors. One member of the Tax Commission commented that some assessors never leave their offices and only "estimate" what certain property is worth each year.

In some instances, property which has not changed hands for more than 80 years is still being assessed on the basis of its last sale price.

Judge Phillips would like to have the authority to order a county to re-assess all real property when it is not meeting the uniform state assessment standards, which is now about 30% of the total value.

Uniformity in assessments is the only fair procedure, Phillips said. It is the only way each Missouri citizen can be assured he is being assessed on the same basis as his next-door neighbor or another citizen on the other side of the state.

Some counties already have reassessed their real property voluntarily, Phillips said, but a means must be found to bring the other counties in line. The Tax Commission will ask the next session of the Legislature, which will convene in January, for powers to order counties to reassess, with the charges applied to the county.

Already the Legislature in a recent session provided a one-year bonding program for counties to levy up to 20 cents for financing reassessment.

Some counties have tried to fight the Tax Commission's recent raises, but to no avail so far. In Southeast Missouri, where Dunklin County was forced to raise its assessments on automobiles and boats by 100 per cent, the largest raise in the state, many county assessors and county courts have said they would refuse to use state guidelines. The St. Francois County Court has even taken the matter to a court of law, but has met little success. Merchants and manufacturers in St. Francois county were only being assessed at 5.9% compared with the 30% statewide assessment.

As an aid to county assessors, the Commission furnishes a list of all automobiles and boats which are licensed in their counties. Until the Commission raised assessments, many counties had refused to use this guide, charging that it was inequitable.

While, on the other hand, the assessors of these counties in some cases were even leaving some cars off the assessment rolls, especially in cases of two-car families. More than 25 per cent of the cars in Dunklin County had not been assessed, Phillips said. He explained that it only shifts the burden of taxes to the citizen who fairly reports his personal property.'

The Tax Commission has taken a great step in its recent personal property raises, and this followed closely the disclosures of unequal assessments of large Missouri utilities and leasing corporations in the state. Judge Phillips said that it is surprising, but leasing is the largest business in Missouri. This includes IBM, Rand Corporation, and others which lease computers, business machines and other similar items in every county.

Until Judge Phillips came on the Commission two years ago, most of these leased machines were not being reported in county assessments, largely because the individual assessors had no concept of the amount of leased property which was in their counties and they failed to check with corporations to see how much property was being leased.

With utilities, Judge Phillips explained that many companies would report the number of trucks they were using, but often failed to report the value of the equipment which these trucks contained. Often, he said, the equipment was worth more than twice as much as the truck.

As a general rule, Phillips pointed out that the failure to report leased property or utility equipment by the corporations involved was not an attempt to cheat county assessors, but merely due to a lack of knowledge about assessment procedures, and often a lack of uniformity in assessment by the local officials. Most corporate presidents, when informed by the Tax Commission that much of their property was not being reported, instituted new measures to give the assessors the correct information. But the end result will mean millions of dollars of property will be added to the tax rolls, Phillips said. And the beneficiaries are the citizens of counties who can profit from better schools and public services.

Having trouble getting bright red tomatoes? Maybe it's just been too hot where you live. When tomatoes, especially those growing in full sun, are exposed to temperatures over 86 degrees only the yellow pigment in the tomatoes develops, not the red. Thus the true bright red fruit is impossible to secure. Orange-red is the best you'll get. When temperatures drop below 86 degrees the red pigment will once more develop.

In Southeast Missouri, where Dunklin County was forced to raise its assessments on automobiles and boats by 100 per cent, the largest raise in the state, many county assessors and county courts have said they would refuse to use state guidelines. The St. Francois County Court has even taken the matter to a court of law, but has met little success. Merchants and manufacturers in St. Francois county were only being assessed at 5.9% compared with the 30% statewide assessment.

As an aid to county assessors, the Commission furnishes a list of all automobiles and boats which are licensed in their counties. Until the Commission raised assessments, many counties had refused to use this guide, charging that it was inequitable.

While, on the other hand, the assessors of these counties in some cases were even leaving some cars off the assessment rolls, especially in cases of two-car families. More than 25 per cent of the cars in Dunklin County had not been assessed, Phillips said. He explained that it only shifts the burden of taxes to the citizen who fairly reports his personal property.

The Tax Commission has taken a great step in its recent personal property raises, and this followed closely the disclosures of unequal assessments of large Missouri utilities and leasing corporations in the state. Judge Phillips said that it is surprising, but leasing is the largest business in Missouri. This includes IBM, Rand Corporation, and others which lease computers, business machines and other similar items in every county.

Until Judge Phillips came on the Commission two years ago, most of these leased machines were not being reported in county assessments, largely because the individual assessors had no concept of the amount of leased property which was in their counties and they failed to check with corporations to see how much property was being leased.

With utilities, Judge Phillips explained that many companies would report the number of trucks they were using, but often failed to report the value of the equipment which these trucks contained. Often, he said, the equipment was worth more than twice as much as the truck.

As a general rule, Phillips pointed out that the failure to report leased property or utility equipment by the corporations involved was not an attempt to cheat county assessors, but merely due to a lack of knowledge about assessment procedures, and often a lack of uniformity in assessment by the local officials. Most corporate presidents, when informed by the Tax Commission that much of their property was not being reported, instituted new measures to give the assessors the correct information. But the end result will mean millions of dollars of property will be added to the tax rolls, Phillips said. And the beneficiaries are the citizens of counties who can profit from better schools and public services.

Having trouble getting bright red tomatoes? Maybe it's just been too hot where you live. When tomatoes, especially those growing in full sun, are exposed to temperatures over 86 degrees only the yellow pigment in the tomatoes develops, not the red. Thus the true bright red fruit is impossible to secure. Orange-red is the best you'll get. When temperatures drop below 86 degrees the red pigment will once more deve.op.

Today In U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 18, the 291st day of 1966. There are 74 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1921, the U.S. Senate ratified the separate treaty of peace which had been signed Aug. 25 with Germany, thus officially closing the books on World War I.

On this date:

In 1867, the United States formally completed the purchase of Alaska.

In 1943, U.S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, and Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov met in Moscow.

In 1944, Russian troops invaded Czechoslovakia.

In 1945, 24 high-ranking Nazis were indicted in Berlin, charged with conspiring against world peace.

Ten years ago...The International Monetary Fund granted to France the right to purchase for francs up to $262,500,000 in the next year to help it build up its gold and dollar reserves.

Five years ago. .Gen. Maxwell Taylor, sent to Viet Nam by President Kennedy, began a seven-day series of talks in Saigon with U.S. and Vietnamese military leaders and Saigon government officials.

One year ago...David Miller, 22, was arrested by FBI agents in New York and charged with burning his draft card at an anti-Viet Nam war demonstration.

Buz Sawyer Joins Kremlin Black List

MOSCOW (AP)-Comic strip character Buz Sawyer today joined Batman on the Kremlin's list of bad guys.

Pravda reproduced one panel of the U.S. comic strip in an effort to show its readers that American comics are trying to create support for U.S. policy in Viet Nam.

The panel shows a group of U.S. Navy fliers who have just returned from a bombing raid. One of them is saying he dropped napalm bombs where he had been told to.

The official Communist party paper told its readers that this flier "is boasting that ' has burnt out all living matter on the Vietnamese land with napalm."

It said producers of these comics 'try to do with kids that which they do not succeed in doing with half the grownup population of the United States, namely:

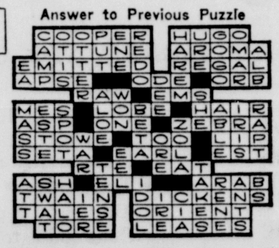

"To convince them of the necessity and the just character of the aggression in Viet Nam."

CHANGE OF PACE from his usual movie roles has Richard Burton in gray wig and medieval costume for the filming in Rome of "Doctor Faustus," the Christopher Marlowe classic which he did on stage earlier this year at England's Oxford University. Costar again is wife Elizabeth Taylor, in the non-speaking role of Helen of Troy.

Colleges' Growth Forecast

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Vast increases in enrollments and state expenditures at Missouri colleges and universities were projected today by the state Commission on Higher Education.

In its first report to Gov. Warren E. Hearnes and the 1967 Legislature, it recommended some built - in admission controls to keep the exploding problem of higher education on an orderly growth basis.

"Within the limits of reason," it said, "every Missouri citizen should have equal opportunity for the type of higher education to suit his needs. Insofar as feasible, everyone should be within commuting distance of higher educational opportunities."

The report broke down its recommendations for the University of Missouri, the state colleges and junior colleges.

For the University of Missouri it recommended:

Concentration on doctoral and professional work, including expanded research.

Limitation on undergraduate students at Columbia, with a freshman class limit no larger than the fall of 1965 and a total full-time enrollment by 1975 of 25,000, compared with about 18,000 now.

Enrollment ceilings by 1975 of 15,000 each at the St. Louis and Kansas City campuses and 8,000 at Rolla, with no additional campuses.

For the most part, only the top one-third of graduating high school seniors should be accepted as freshmen.

For the state colleges:

Concentration on undergraduate programs with selected Master's Degree offerings.

An enrollment ceiling of 12,000 for each college by 1975, with no additional state colleges.

For the most part, enrolling first time freshmen from the upper two-thirds of their graduating classes.

For the junior colleges:

No new junior colleges without a potential enrollment of at least 750 in four years.

Increased emphasis on occupational and terminal programs.

Acceptance of all high school graduates accompanied by realistic counseling for those not desiring or capable of earning a four-year degree.

Establishment of a separate state junior college board.

Increased aid for junior colleges at 50 per cent up to a maximum of $400 for each 24 semester hours compared with the present $240.

The commission, headed by H. Lang Rogers of Joplin as chairman, said there seems to be a need for additional junior college districts in the Delta region of southeastern Missouri, St. Charles and Franklin counties, in the area around Independence and at Springfield.

As far as enrollment is concerned, the reported predicted total college and university enrollment would more than double from 106,754 in the fall of 1965 to 216,452 by 1975.

Turning to financial problems, the commission predicted operating costs for the University of Missouri would jump from $72,136,000 this year to $180,167,000 by 1974-75.

State college operating costs, including Lincoln University, would increase from $28,144,000 this year to $65,792,000 and junior college operations would increase from $10,412,000 to $36,370,000.

Thus, total operating expenditures for public higher education would rise from $100,691,000 to $282,329,565 during the period.

The commission estimated capital improvement costs of the university of Missouri system at $32,783,000 in 1967-68 totaling $192,777,000 by 1975.

Junior college capital improvement needs by 1975 were estimated at $75 million.

12 FIREMEN

flame still poked from windows and black smoke spread through the streets.

The fire broke out in the basement of 7 E. 22nd St., a four-story building, then spread west to 904 Broadway and north to 8 E. 23rd St.

The trapped firemen were caught either by a backdraft or gas explosion. Fire Commissioner Robert O. Lowery said. The impact apparently broke down a wall, sending the men into the heart of the inferno.

The cause of the blaze was not immediately known. The buildings were used by a wide range of businesses, including several clothing firms.

Three Charged With Speeding

Three persons were charged with speeding Monday night by Sikeston police.

Charged in separate arrests were: Emory McCauley, 112 Lincoln, Richard Sherrod, 1413 Henry, and Bobby R. Robinson, 314 Daniel. Robinson also was charged with improper registration and supplying intoxicants to a minor.

Glen A. Helms of Charleston arrested with Robinson was charged with illegal possession of intoxicants. He was transferred to Scott County authority.

In other police activity Monday, Jim Kneezle, 230 Marian, reported that some boys pulled next to his car while stopped at Main and Malone and threw catsup on his vehicle.

Judge Craig was introduced by Jim Mac Emerson, chairman.

The committee, which serves to advise and interpret the division of welfare's programs for homeless, dependent and neglected children, learned that 143 Scott County children received services in the 1965-66 fiscal year.

There were 10 children with special problems, 11 unmarried parents, seven in relative home care, 35 in foster care, 26 in adoptive homes and one child who received general services, she continued.

Emerson then reported that the committee had petitioned the county court for a second child welfare worker. He pointed out that child welfare case loads are limited by federal regulation and more children can be served only with additional workers. He added, that he knew there was a great need for another worker in Scott County.

A guest was Mrs. Evelyn Driscoll, Jefferson City, child welfare field supervisor.

Committee members present were Mrs. Milem L. Limbaugh, Mrs. Melvin Glueck and Ollie Amick. Guests present included Melvin Glueck, associate judge, Scott county court; K. M. Health Officer Testifies in Assassin's Trial

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) - A government health officer testified today that he diagnosed Dimitrio Tsafendas as a schizophrenic last June, three months before he assassinated Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd.

Dr. Ralph Kossew told the Supreme Court he examined Tsafendas after he applied for a disability grant. But he said the 48-year-old mulatto was "not certifiable" - not sufficiently affected to be confined to a mental institution.

Kossew's testimony came on the second day of the trial of Tsafendas, who stabbed Verwoerd Sept. 6.

The court is hearing testimony in support of the defense contention that Tsafendas was mentally unsound at the time of the murder and therefore should be committed to a mental institution.

Until the court rules on this issue, Tsafendas is not required to plead to the charge of murder filed against him.

The court was told Monday that Tsafendas claimed that a "demon" tapeworm inside him caused him to assassinate Verwoerd.

Investors' Corner

Know your broker...what he can and can't do for you...new Exchange booklet.

Let's assume that, as a new investor or one of the estimated 20 million Americans who now own stock, you are considering an investment. And you ask yourself which broker to use.

* * *

If you're investing for the first time, chances are you don't know a broker personally. So you consider the recommendation of a friend. Or recall a sign on a window that reads: "Member New York Stock Exchange." Or look for a member firm in the stock broker section of the Yellow Pages.

* * *

It's a good identification to look for, and easy to find. There are more than 3,300 member firm offices in 850 U.S. cities. They have some 33,000 brokers called registered representatives.

* * *

If you choose a broker in a member firm, there will be 174 years of Exchange history behind him. Since those first days, members have evolved a remarkable set of rules and regulations to govern themselves.

* * *

Some relate to a firm's finances. One calls for maintaining adequate capital. Another prescribes an annual surprise audit by the firm's independent public accountant. And the Exchange itself makes periodic spot checks.

* * *

The registered representative who will serve you is a full-time broker. When he first became registered, he had to meet Exchange requirements for knowledge of the securities business.

* * *

His knowledge is yours for the asking. Terms and procedures often puzzle the new investor, so he'll expect your questions. He can explain the differences between common and preferred stocks and bonds. You may want to know how the commission is figured. Or how your order will be executed.

* * *

You'll be wise to discuss your situation with him. How much you should consider investing, after providing for living expenses and emergencies. Talk over your goal—growth of your money for the future, or dividends to bolster your regular income, or the relative safety of principal and income that might draw you to high-grade preferred stocks or bonds.

* * *

His is not a push-button world, of course. Whatever facts and advice he can supply about companies that attract you—their earnings, dividends, prospects as he views them—he can't guarantee you a profit. There will still be need for your own cool-headed estimation of the risks and chances of success.

* * *

Choosing your broker carefully, knowing what to expect of him and how to use him, is the first step to wise investing.

Colleges' Growth Forecast

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Vast increases in enrollments and state expenditures at Missouri colleges and universities were projected today by the state Commission on Higher Education.

In its first report to Gov. Warren E. Hearnes and the 1967 Legislature, it recommended some built - in admission controls to keep the exploding problem of higher education on an orderly growth basis.

"Within the limits of reason," it said, "every Missouri citizen should have equal opportunity for the type of higher education to suit his needs. Insofar as feasible, everyone should be within commuting distance of higher educational opportunities."

The report broke down its recommendations for the University of Missouri, the state colleges and junior colleges.

For the University of Missouri it recommended:

Concentration on doctoral and professional work, including expanded research.

Limitation on undergraduate students at Columbia, with a freshman class limit no larger than the fall of 1965 and a total full-time enrollment by 1975 of 25,000, compared with about 18,000 now.

Enrollment ceilings by 1975 of 15,000 each at the St. Louis and Kansas City campuses and 8,000 at Rolla, with no additional campuses.

For the most part, only the top one-third of graduating high school seniors should be accepted as freshmen.

For the state colleges:

Concentration on undergraduate programs with selected Master's Degree offerings.

An enrollment ceiling of 12,000 for each college by 1975, with no additional state colleges.

For the most part, enrolling first time freshmen from the upper two-thirds of their graduating classes.

For the junior colleges:

No new junior colleges without a potential enrollment of at least 750 in four years.

Increased emphasis on occupational and terminal programs.

Acceptance of all high school graduates accompanied by realistic counseling for those not desiring or capable of earning a four-year degree.

Establishment of a separate state junior college board.

Increased aid for junior colleges at 50 per cent up to a maximum of $400 for each 24 semester hours compared with the present $240.

The commission, headed by H. Lang Rogers of Joplin as chairman, said there seems to be a need for additional junior college districts in the Delta region of southeastern Missouri, St. Charles and Franklin counties, in the area around Independence and at Springfield.

As far as enrollment is concerned, the reported predicted total college and university enrollment would more than double from 106,754 in the fall of 1965 to 216,452 by 1975.

Turning to financial problems, the commission predicted operating costs for the University of Missouri would jump from $72,136,000 this year to $180,167,000 by 1974-75.

State college operating costs, including Lincoln University, would increase from $28,144,000 this year to $65,792,000 and junior college operations would increase from $10,412,000 to $36,370,000.

Thus, total operating expenditures for public higher education would rise from $100,691,000 to $282,329,565 during the period.

The commission estimated capital improvement costs of the university of Missouri system at $32,783,000 in 1967-68 totaling $192,777,000 by 1975.

Junior college capital improvement needs by 1975 were estimated at $75 million.

flame still poked from windows and black smoke spread through the streets.

The fire broke out in the basement of 7 E. 22nd St., a four-story building, then spread west to 904 Broadway and north to 8 E. 23rd St.

The trapped firemen were caught either by a backdraft or gas explosion. Fire Commissioner Robert O. Lowery said. The impact apparently broke down a wall, sending the men into the heart of the inferno.

The cause of the blaze was not immediately known. The buildings were used by a wide range of businesses, including several clothing firms.

Three Charged With Speeding

Three persons were charged with speeding Monday night by Sikeston police.

Charged in separate arrests were: Emory McCauley, 112 Lincoln, Richard Sherrod, 1413 Henry, and Bobby R. Robinson, 314 Daniel. Robinson also was charged with improper registration and supplying intoxicants to a minor.

Glen A. Helms of Charleston arrested with Robinson was charged with illegal possession of intoxicants. He was transferred to Scott County authority.

In other police activity Monday, Jim Kneezle, 230 Marian, reported that some boys pulled next to his car while stopped at Main and Malone and threw catsup on his vehicle.

Health Officer Testifies in Assassin's Trial

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) - A government health officer testified today that he diagnosed Dimitrio Tsafendas as a schizophrenic last June, three months before he assassinated Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd.

Dr. Ralph Kossew told the Supreme Court he examined Tsafendas after he applied for a disability grant. But he said the 48-year-old mulatto was "not certifiable" - not sufficiently affected to be confined to a mental institution.

Kossew's testimony came on the second day of the trial of Tsafendas, who stabbed Verwoerd Sept. 6.

The court is hearing testimony in support of the defense contention that Tsafendas was mentally unsound at the time of the murder and therefore should be committed to a mental institution.

Until the court rules on this issue, Tsafendas is not required to plead to the charge of murder filed against him.

The court was told Monday that Tsafendas claimed that a "demon" tapeworm inside him caused him to assassinate Verwoerd.

Investors' Corner

Know your broker...what he can and can't do for you...new Exchange booklet.

Let's assume that, as a new investor or one of the estimated 20 million Americans who now own stock, you are considering an investment. And you ask yourself which broker to use.

* * *

If you're investing for the first time, chances are you don't know a broker personally. So you consider the recommendation of a friend. Or recall a sign on a window that reads: "Member New York Stock Exchange." Or look for a member firm in the stock broker section of the Yellow Pages.

* * *

It's a good identification to look for, and easy to find. There are more than 3,300 member firm offices in 850 U.S. cities. They have some 33,000 brokers called registered representatives.

* * *

If you choose a broker in a member firm, there will be 174 years of Exchange history behind him. Since those first days, members have evolved a remarkable set of rules and regulations to govern themselves.

* * *

Some relate to a firm's finances. One calls for maintaining adequate capital. Another prescribes an annual surprise audit by the firm's independent public accountant. And the Exchange itself makes periodic spot checks.

* * *

The registered representative who will serve you is a full-time broker. When he first became registered, he had to meet Exchange requirements for knowledge of the securities business.

* * *

His knowledge is yours for the asking. Terms and procedures often puzzle the new investor, so he'll expect your questions. He can explain the differences between common and preferred stocks and bonds. You may want to know how the commission is figured. Or how your order will be executed.

* * *

You'll be wise to discuss your situation with him. How much you should consider investing, after providing for living expenses and emergencies. Talk over your goal—growth of your money for the future, or dividends to bolster your regular income, or the relative safety of principal and income that might draw you to high-grade preferred stocks or bonds.

* * *

His is not a push-button world, of course. Whatever facts and advice he can supply about companies that attract you—their earnings, dividends, prospects as he views them—he can't guarantee you a profit. There will still be need for your own cool-headed estimation of the risks and chances of success.

* * *

Choosing your broker carefully, knowing what to expect of him and how to use him, is the first step to wise investing.
